A Few Thoughts on Our Wonderful Students

We receive 18 applications for every seat in our entering class. The students we enroll are extremely talented and richly diverse. That they are gifted is a credit to the families that raised them and to their own hard work. This fall's entering class had the highest LSAT scores of any of Florida's 11 law schools and some of the highest in the region. Their average LSAT score was 162, with 25% of the students scoring more than 164 and only 25% scoring below 161. Our students now represent 191 different colleges and universities, although roughly 20% attended Florida State and 20% attended the University of Florida.

The students also get credit for an extraordinary culture of mutual supportiveness. In their words, they are "competitive without being cutthroat." For example, a student whose hard drive crashes—destroying all the notes she has taken over the course of a semester—will find classmates willing to make up the loss. This is a place to work hard but it is also a place to be compassionate and to have some fun. Lifelong professional relationships and friendships often are the result. This year's Rivalry Week and Powder Puff football game, described inside these pages, reflect a very special spirit shared by all our students.

Some of our student successes are all their own. Our Student Bar Association's latest award, the 2010 National Public Interest Achievement Award, is solely the result of the spontaneity and creativity of our Student Bar Association leadership. And our students alone can take credit for placing us first among the state's law schools in passing the Florida Bar Examination for six of the last ten administrations. Nothing is more solitary or arduous than taking the bar exam.

I like to think, however, that many of our student successes are the result of a dynamic series of collaborations with our wonderful faculty. As teachers, we on the faculty love to feel that we have played a part, however small, in the professional development of our students. Nat Stern, as faculty advisor to the Moot Court Team, can take great pride in this spring's four first-place victories in national moot court competitions. So, too, can the many other faculty, as well as alumni and friends, who serve as coaches and judges to our various Moot Court teams. Ruth Stone, as faculty advisor to the Mock Trial Team, can take great pride in our recent first-place victory in the Florida Justice Association's E. Earle Zehmer Mock Trial Competition. Here again, thanks also go to the alumni and friends who serve as judges and coaches. On another front, many of our students are honing their legal skills by crafting articles, published in external journals as well as in our own journals, under the watchful eyes of our faculty.

It is of course terrific that our students have done so well on job placement. We are hoping that the May 2010 graduates have the same great success as the May 2009 graduates, who had a 99% placement rate by nine months after graduation. This kind of success requires a daily effort, but it is one well worth making. Here again, much of the heavy lifting is being done by the students themselves. Employers visiting on campus like what they see. They describe our students as poised, personable and well-rounded. They also like that our students are taking courses that are helpful to today's practice. Thanks to an engaged and caring faculty, our curriculum is richer than ever. We offer courses that provide a broad historical and philosophical background as well as treatment of cutting-edge practice issues. Many faculty members also take an active role in the job searches of our students. Most recently, for example, faculty members redoubled their efforts to help students obtain judicial clerkships. This year's results are already encouraging: Members of the May 2011 graduating class have already obtained seven highly coveted federal clerkships.

The critical placement efforts are those of our alums who bring job openings to campus. We will be glad to arrange a teleconference or in-person meeting with as few or as many of our students as you like. Please don't hesitate to call Placement Director Elmer Ignacio, 850.644.7471, or me, 850.644.3071, if you'd like to discuss our students further.

Have a wonderful holiday season!

Sincerely,

FRED KARLINSKY: LETTING HIS VOICE BE HEARD

By Christi N. Morgan

When Hurricane Andrew hit the United States in 1992, it was the costliest Atlantic hurricane in U.S. history. The bulk of Andrew's wrath was unleashed on South Florida, which devastated many residents but was fortuitous for Fred Karlinsky. Now one of the nation's leading insurance regulatory law practitioners, the Miami native has Andrew to thank for his specialization in the area.

"I graduated law school in December of '92 and Hurricane Andrew had hit right before that," said Karlinsky, who earned his bachelor's degree from the University of Miami. "The firm I'm with now and was with then was named general counsel for the Florida Residential Property and Casualty Joint Underwriting Association, the predecessor to Citizens Property Insurance Corporation."

As the firm's insurance-related practice expanded, Karlinsky's legal acumen, business development skill and political savvy made him an invaluable asset, leading the firm to make him a shareholder and change its name to Colodny, Fass, Talenfeld, Karlinsky & Abate.

Thanks to Karlinsky's efforts, the firm has grown its insurance regulatory and transactional practice. It now services global insurers and insurance-related interests. As testament to this expansion, for three consecutive years regulatory and transactional matters all over the world, Karlinsky also helps his clients with operational issues including vendor relationships and start-up activities.

"I work with some interesting and unique people and help them create more jobs for the economy," said Karlinsky about one of the most gratifying parts of his corporate work. "Helping companies secure licenses in other states is one of the major aspects of our practice. Once we help a company get licensed, they'll open up an office, which necessitates hiring there as well as at any ancillary facilities they may create in order to serve their clients."

What makes his job especially complicated is that he represents companies with operations in all 50 states.

"The way the insurance regulatory environment works is that each state has a different regulator and each state has different rules and regulations," said Karlinsky.

"So I need to be familiar with all of those and I need to be able to assist my clients in each of the states we are doing business in. In the last several years, there hasn't been a state that we haven't had multiple connections with on the regulatory or transactional side.”

In addition to handling insurance

When Karlinsky isn’t working on regulatory issues for a client, he is busy leading his firm’s governmental consulting practice, which has been named among Florida’s top 10. As a law student, Karlinsky interned with the Florida Legislature for about a year and a half. That job and the connections it afforded Karlinsky served as a springboard to great success in the legislative arena.

Each year during Florida’s legislative session, Karlinsky primarily practices out of his firm’s downtown Tallahassee office so he can closely monitor lawmakers’ actions. Along with his Florida representation of the Property and Casualty Insurers of America, the nation’s largest property and casualty insurer trade organizations, he serves as general counsel and chief lobbyist for the Florida Property and Casualty Association, which caters to Florida-specific insurers.

“Through my efforts on behalf of both of those entities, we work with the legislature and try and help craft laws that are both fair to the consumers and fair to the insurers and businesses that may purchase insurance,” said Karlinsky.

He helps shape all types of insurance-related legislative initiatives including property and casualty, automobile, health, workers’ compensation and medical malpractice insurance. Heavily involved in a substantial revision to Florida’s automobile insurance laws, he also was pivotal in redrafting Florida’s property residual market statute, as well as rewriting the state’s workers’ compensation, medical malpractice and homeowners insurance laws.

Karlinsky takes advantage of his time in Tallahassee by also teaching at Florida State Law each spring. When he teaches in 2012, a courtroom in the law school’s building addition will bear his family’s name.

The adjunct professor co-teaches The Law and Economics of Insurance Regulation, a course he helped create with Associate Professor of Law and Economics Dino Falaschetti.

“We divide the course up,” said Karlinsky, whose extensive experience lecturing around the world about insurance regulation makes him a natural in the classroom. “The first four weeks Professor Falaschetti discusses theories of economic consideration relative to regulation. The next four weeks I discuss the aspects relating to the regulatory environment of insurers and the last four weeks we bring in guest speakers including, in the past, Florida Insurance Commissioner Kevin McCarty.

“We get folks to understand not only the aspects of insurance regulation, but also any regulated industry because there are so many synergies between the regulation of an insurer and the regulation of other industries.”

When he gets a much-deserved break from traveling and is home in South Florida, Karlinsky spends the majority of his free time with his family. He and his wife of 10 years, Autumn, are the proud parents of daughter Allie, 7, and son Spencer, 4. Ironically, the family also travels extensively.

“We go to beaches; my kids love Disney World, so for better or worse

I’m at Disney World about 15 times a year,” joked Karlinsky. His family frequently joins him when he travels for work. “They’ve been to locations such as London, Paris, Mexico and Bermuda,” he said.

Leading by example, Karlinsky is instilling in his children the importance of being good members of the community. The father of two is a guardian ad litem and volunteers with Florida’s Children First, which serves the legal needs of foster children. Heavily engaged in state and national politics, he has served as regional finance chairman and Jewish outreach coalition chairman for the Republican Party of Florida. He also is a board member of the Republican Jewish Coalition and serves as co-chairman of Team 100 – the Republican National Committee’s major donor program. Karlinsky and his wife recently were among the 28 couples and individuals appointed to Governor-Elect Rick Scott’s Inaugural Host Committee.

Supporting education also is an important mission for Karlinsky.

“I feel very strongly that Florida State helped me achieve some of the things I’ve achieved which has given me some significant opportunities,” said Karlinsky, who has endowed the Karlinsky Family Scholarship at the law school and serves on its Board of Visitors.

“It is important to get involved,” said Karlinsky. “If you want to make a difference you cannot just sit around and not let your voice be heard.” ■

Debra Henley Takes Top Job at Florida Justice Association

By Christi N. Morgan

Debra Henley didn't think she was going to like Tallahassee when she arrived two-and-a-half decades ago. The University of Florida law student was welcomed by a very dark and stormy day when she traveled to the city to interview for a legislative internship. After being selected for the position and spending more time in Tallahassee as a transient student at Florida State's law school, Henley's impression of the capital city quickly changed. She eventually transferred and graduated from Florida State with honors and has lived in Tallahassee ever since.

Henley has been lobbying on behalf of Florida trial attorneys for almost two decades. After serving as the Florida Justice Association's (FJA) legislative director since 1991, Henley was selected from more than 50 applicants to be executive director of the organization in May. While she still is intricately involved in lobbying activities during the legislative session, she now has many more responsibilities on her plate. Henley oversees the association's political election activities, including fundraising, race monitoring and building relationships with candidates. She also devotes time to membership recruitment and development, CLE programming, budgeting and all other projects that FJA undertakes.

"The good news for me is we have many committed and talented trial lawyers – many of whom are FSU alums – who work with me every day, keep us focused and get the job done," said Henley, who counts law school alumni Mel Martinez ('73), Wayne Hogan ('72), James Kelaher ('81) and Lance

Block ('84) among her association's past presidents. FJA's current president is Florida State undergraduate alumnus Rich Newsome; Michael Haggard, who earned his bachelor's degree from Florida State, is immediate past president. Coincidentally, Henley served on the Florida Commission on Ethics with Haggard's father, Florida State Board of Trustees Chair Wm. Andrew “Andy” Haggard, shortly after she graduated from law school.

“We represent lawyers who represent people – making sure that every Florida citizen has their right to their day in court and that the doors of the courthouse remain open to all people to seek redress of any injury.”

Before Henley could advocate for trial lawyers, she decided she needed to walk in their shoes.

“I did not feel I could represent the trial lawyers and their clients until I knew what the practice of law was all about – until I knew what trial lawyers do every day,” said Henley, who had two job offers that interested her the most when she graduated in 1988 – one to practice law and one to lobby for her current association. She practiced at Connor and Martinez with her former Trial Advocacy professor, Ken Connor ('72), for about two years before she moved to the FJA. “I enjoyed the practice of law; it was the hardest work I've ever done. The pressure of having the entire weight of the client's case on your shoulders in the courtroom was more than I expected. I felt that my true interest was in the legislative process, because it would allow me to deal on a macro level with issues involving all clients who were seeking compensation for injuries and to do that in the political process was better suited to my experience.”

Henley also draws upon values she acquired while working at “the happiest place on Earth” before law school. Lessons Henley learned at Disney World – an emphasis on customer service and striving for perfection – are ideals she uses every day as she leads the FJA.

“The guests were always the number one concern,” said Henley. “We had to treat the guests like they were kings and queens of the day. I see the clients that our lawyers represent in that light – we have to work hard for them every day. And our members need to be treated with the utmost customer service and respect. My experience with Disney really carries over to that.”

Henley jokes that the methods of crowd control she employed working in Frontierland and at the Haunted Mansion also apply when she is working with members at the Capitol during legislative session.

The FJA will celebrate its 50th anniversary in 2011. While Henley is celebrating the past, she is clearly focused on the future.

“We want to grow our membership,” said Henley. “We would like to turn back some of the restrictions on the rights and remedies of individuals. We need to educate the public on the role of trial lawyers and all of the good they do out there for the public. People need good legal advice and assistance now more than ever.”

The mother of two is so devoted to her organization's mission that she even involves her teenage children, Sara and Cole, in FJA activities whenever possible. And she hopes others will get involved as well.

“If you are interested in practicing law in the civil justice system, on the plaintiff's side or on the defense side, you need to care what happens to the civil justice system. If you are passionate about that aspect of the law, then you must devote the time and energy to protect the civil justice system and work on its behalf.” ■

Rachel Fugate Finds her Passion in Media Law

By Christi N. Morgan

While many lawyers spend their days in suits and heels, one of the perks of Rachel Fugate's job is that she usually arrives at the office wearing jeans, a polo shirt and flip flops. The 1998 Florida State Law graduate's attire may be laid back, but her list of cases is evidence that her practice is anything but.

As a partner at Thomas & LoCicero, Fugate practices predominantly media and first amendment law with arguably one of Florida's top firms specializing in the areas. Florida residents – and many outside the Sunshine State – have most likely heard about her work from the media entities she represents.

Fugate recently represented almost every media outlet in Florida in a lawsuit against the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA), Florida State University and the university's attorneys.

"We thought it was a pretty straightforward case," said Fugate. "The NCAA was providing documents to FSU on this secure, secret Web site so that they wouldn't become public record. The NCAA fought it vigorously and at the end of the day all the courts agreed with us up to the First District Court of Appeal." Fugate argued the case before the appellate court.

She is not new to cases garnering media attention. One of Fugate's first big cases came after the 2000 presiden-

“We represented an entire consortium of newspapers and media entities that were seeking access to the under vote and over vote ballots,” said Fugate, who was an associate at Holland & Knight at the time. “Just as all of the supervisors were doing their recounts, the media wanted access to do their own recount to see who really won that election, but a lot of the supervisors of elections weren’t allowing the media to come in and look at those ballots.

“Our case never went up to the appellate court, but we initially established in one of the circuit courts the right for them to see those ballots. That was one of the most significant cases that I worked on. I say to this day it was the highlight of my career because I was quoted in The New York Times as the attorney for The New York Times.”

During her impressive career, the University of Florida public relations major also has sued the Federal Emergency Management Agency on behalf of the Sun-Sentinel, represented CNN and other media outlets that were seeking access to a list of suspected felons in Florida, and sued the state to gain access to Department of Children & Families records regarding missing foster child Rilya Wilson.

“Once those records came out, a lot was uncovered about what went wrong and how Rilya fell through the cracks,” said Fugate. “That actually led to legislation to try to help correct some of those mistakes. Seeing the impact that just getting my clients access to information can have is pretty moving.”

Much of Fugate’s work involves litigating on behalf of her clients, but she also handles day-to-day issues for reporters who need access to information for a 6 p.m. deadline, who are being kicked out of a courtroom or who need her to review an article before it is printed. She has even helped a news director whose reporter was taken hostage while working on a consumer story.

“I’m kind of like a firefighter,” said Fugate. “When reporters are your clients, there is always some emergency or fire that you are putting out for them. So trying to describe a typical day as a media lawyer is almost impossible. Reporters can be some of the most demanding clients and some of the ones that have the shortest deadlines. We always have to try to operate quickly for them. All of my newspaper clients have my home phone number and my cell phone number, and it’s not rare to get a call in the middle of the night or on the weekend.”

Though she never knows what each day will bring, Fugate is fortunate that her schedule usually allows her to leave work early in the afternoons to ride her horse, Troublesome Girl. The horse – which is one of two that she owns – is actually the reason the avid equestrian met and married Jack Behring, a service manager for a national pump company. Jack’s uncle was Troublesome Girl’s trainer during her racing days in Miami. Fugate also shows her horses on weekends.

During the fall, many of Fugate’s Saturdays include watching University of Florida football. She and Jack travel to Gainesville to watch a couple of games each year in the “Swamp.” They also have season basketball tickets, so they visit Fugate’s alma mater for several of those games as well.

Fugate is content both personally and professionally. She wants to continue riding horses and to help her clients get the information they need to write good stories. She considers herself lucky that she loves what she does for a living.

“I never thought going to law school that I would find something that I really did enjoy this much. And I never thought I would find a passion for an area of the law,” said Fugate. “When you do media law, your clients have a real belief and passion in what they do. When you represent them, they expect you to have that same level of commitment to what they are trying to do and to their principles and if you don’t have that, they know it. A lot of times my clients are just fighting for principles and if you don’t believe in those principles, you probably don’t have a shot at representing them.” ■

Leigh Kellett Fletcher Strikes Balance Between Complex Practice and Family

By Christi N. Morgan

mother-daughter music lessons.

“My daughter has played harp since she was 3,” said the class of 1997 alumna, and “I have started taking piano lessons so we can play duets together. Our daily music practice together is something that I really treasure.”

October is an especially fun bonding time of year for Fletcher and Katie. “Every year I sew my daughter’s Halloween costume. It has become our annual tradition. We go to the fabric store, and have a ball picking out fabric and deciding on the costume and the pattern,” said Fletcher. She and Katie also host their neighborhood’s Halloween block party.

When Fletcher was about her daughter’s age, her family moved from New York to Columbus, Georgia – her mother’s hometown. There, she was surrounded by lawyers including her grandfather, Lennie Davis, who was the city attorney. She recalls many election nights spent with her grandfather while he supervised election, and going to court to watch her uncle, who was a judge.

“It was just how I grew up. Being a lawyer was an honorable profession and that’s what you did,” said Fletcher, who was 15 years old when she entered college.

Wanting to follow in her grandfather’s footsteps, Fletcher also earned a master’s degree in public administration while she was in law school at Florida State. Fletcher’s career path changed

When Leigh Kellett Fletcher isn’t working on million or billion dollar deals, she is most likely spending time with her 7-year-old daughter, Katie. A shareholder at Stearns Weaver Miller

Weissler Alhadeff & Sitterson, P.A., Fletcher admits that she works “crazy hours,” but that doesn’t stop her from co-leading Katie’s Brownie troupe – which she admits to enjoying as much as her daughter does – and attending when she was offered an opportunity to work in private practice and enjoyed it. “That was more in line with my long-range goals,” said Fletcher.

While it would be accurate to describe Fletcher’s practice areas as environmental and land use law, that would not reveal the sophistication of her job. “My practice is an interesting mix of public finance, environmental and real estate. Primarily what I do is work with clients who want to redevelop contaminated sites for either affordable housing or renewable energy projects. I do environmental reviews and assessments for clients and some straightforward land use, such as community development districts, but the vast majority of my work is what I would call community economic development.”

This allows Fletcher not only to practice law, but also to fulfill her interests in housing and in securing environmental justice.

“The projects I work on really have an impact not only on the quality of the environment, but also on the quality of people’s lives,” said Fletcher, who majored in environmental science and history at Wellesley College. “The most interesting part of my job is the complexity of a lot of the work that I do – being able to work in three different areas for clients, and having the end product usually be something I feel has a net positive benefit for the universe.”

Her major deals include the Encore Project – a development currently under construction in downtown Tampa that, according to its Web site, “commemorates, revives and restores the rhythm of the once vibrant business and community district.” She helped obtain $38 million in stimulus money for the 12-city-block project. In addition, she is working on a project to redevelop 68 acres in downtown Orlando that will attract high-tech companies and their employees. Once completed, the Creative Village project will have a build-out value of more than $1 billion.

In October, Fletcher was recognized for her work by the CREW Network, a national group that works to advance the success of women in commercial real estate. Fletcher received the group’s 20 Under 40 Award honoring her “as one of twenty exceptional women under the age of forty for her extraordinary professional accomplishments within the commercial real estate industry.”

From her firm’s Tampa office, Fletcher oversees all environmental matters for the firm. Stearns Weaver serves clients from its four offices in Florida, and she does work for some of those clients in the U.S. Virgin Islands.

“In 2006, I was asked by a Florida client to the Virgin Islands and help their local counsel because they had been sued under the Endangered Species Act,” said Fletcher, who owns a home in the territory. “I soon realized that some of our other clients had projects or interests in the Virgin Islands, and because there wasn’t really an environmental law practitioner there, it seemed reasonable and practical to sit for the VI Bar exam. I passed the exam, and was admitted to the VI Bar in 2008.”

Fletcher is adept at getting the most out of her days by mixing work and pleasure when she can. She currently serves on the board of “Serving Up”, an organization based in New Orleans that teaches indigent young people how to be fine dining servers. “Serving Up” was the brainchild of a waiter, Tyrone, who Fletcher and her colleagues met when in New Orleans last year for a national brownfields conference. Since then, Fletcher and others have worked with Tyrone to develop a business plan and to find partners. In October, Fletcher flew with her friends to New Orleans to attend an all-day planning retreat for the organization’s pilot class of six homeless teenage mothers.

“I believe that lawyers have an obligation to the community that is not just about serving your clients but also about serving the greater good. I am fortunate that my practice allows me to do that in much of my day-to-day practice, but I don’t think that abrogates the requirement that you also do it voluntarily for other causes.” ■

3L Jamie Kozisek: Human Rights Advocate

By Sally Bowman

Jamie Kozisek with
Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter

Her resume reads as an accomplished international law attorney's might. Jamie Kozisek has written a 205-page synopsis of Israeli-Palestinian negotiations since the formation of Israel in 1948. She also has contributed to a paper on international treaties on human rights and assisted in researching asylum applications. She has worked and studied in Spain, Lebanon and Morocco.

The 3L student of Czech and Palestinian descent dreams of working with refugee populations, but realizes in this economic climate, those jobs may be hard to come by, so she is developing a series of backup plans.

She is considering taking the foreign service officer exam, which would allow her to work in embassies abroad, and could lead to work in an ambassadorial capacity. As she nears graduation in spring 2011, she continues to build connections she hopes will bolster her opportunities.

"I am becoming a certified Florida mediator in the spring," the Nebraska native said. "I really enjoy alternative dispute resolution. The idea of helping parties resolve their disputes through a mutual agreement rather than having a resolution imposed on them by a court really appeals to me." She hopes to be able to get her feet wet on a local level and utilize the experience later on a global scale.

Another opportunity Kozisek hopes presents itself to her is working with an international human rights organization. That opportunity may be opened through her summer internship: She was a graduate assistant for The Carter

Center, Conflict Resolution Program, in Atlanta. “It was a really enriching experience. I was able to work on both international and domestic matters of conflict resolution. It was very refreshing to be in a professional atmosphere where people believe in the same things I believe in,” she said.

Kozisek spent half of her 15-week appointment writing legal memos about topics as wide ranging as the postponement of Palestinian elections and contract negotiations regarding farm workers’ rights with the Coalition of Immokalee Workers. “The Carter Center keeps its finger on the pulse of various international and domestic negotiations and I was able to assist them in tracking the progress of those efforts so that they would be informed when called upon to help,” she explained.

The other half of her time was spent writing the Israeli-Palestinian negotiations summary document that will appear on the Carter Center’s Web site. Her performance was so successful, her supervisors at the Carter Center called her one of the best interns they had ever had and asked her to extend her internship to 15 weeks from the standard 10. Kozisek’s internship experience and her ability to speak Arabic proficiently will likely translate into the opportunity to serve as an elections observer in the Middle East or North Africa.

Kozisek also is honing her skills working with refugee and asylum populations. As an undergraduate and law student at Florida State University, she went to Lebanon to work for the Center for the Advancement of Human Rights. On one trip, she worked with non-governmental organizations focused on women’s rights. A few years later, she assisted in developing children’s literacy projects for impoverished communities, including refugee camps.

After earning dual bachelor’s degrees in Middle Eastern studies and communications, Kozisek worked for the Council on American Islamic Relations (CAIR), a civil rights organization

“While civil rights are obviously very important, I’d prefer to work on global human rights problems like human trafficking, refugee and asylum issues, or prosecuting individuals who have carried out genocide.”

in Tampa, for about a year and a half before returning to Florida State for law school.

“Working there made me realize that I definitely wanted to do something related to international law rather than domestic,” she said. “While civil rights are obviously very important, I’d prefer to work on global human rights problems like human trafficking, refugee and asylum issues, or prosecuting individuals who have carried out genocide.”

As a law student, Kozisek has tailored her curriculum and extracurricular activities to meet those goals as much as possible. She served on the editorial board of the Journal of Transnational Law and Policy and as a research assistant, and helped a professor prepare a paper on international treaties on human rights. She earned credit working in the Public Interest Law Center in the Children’s Advocacy Clinic and won the intramural Jessup International Moot Court competition as a 2L. She volunteered for the St. Thomas Human Rights Institute during Spring Break and interned for the Florida Supreme Court Dispute Resolution Center.

The Tampa resident has been very involved in a multitude of student organizations, including the Public Interest Law Students Association, American Civil Liberties Union and Congress of Graduate Students. She even helped co-found the Middle Eastern Law Students Association as a 1L. “My practical experience at Florida State has been phenomenal,” she said. “For instance, working at the Public Interest Law Center made me feel a lot more comfortable in the courtroom, not like a fish out of water.”

Kozisek is visiting Florida International University in the spring to take specific classes, including an Immigration and Human Rights Clinic and a Spanish for Lawyers course to improve her intermediate Spanish skills. Florida State Law will soon offer its own Spanish for Lawyers course and is reinforcing its curricular offerings for international human rights.

After graduation, Kozisek is considering earning an LL.M. in international law, and she is applying for jobs with a variety of international organizations. “I’d ideally like to be in a situation where I can contribute to helping people who need it the most, so I’m staying open to career opportunities that will help me reach that goal,” she said. ■

Alumni Selected for Leadership Post and Awards at National Convention

Ben Crump

Conti Moore

Daryl Parks

Daryl Parks ('95) was elected president of the National Bar Association (NBA) at the group's 85th Annual Bar Convention in August. Parks, a partner at Parks & Crump in Tallahassee, was sworn in as president-elect at the meeting and will assume the presidency during the association's 2011 convention.

"This is a tremendous honor, and I am humbled at the confidence members of this prestigious organization have in me," Parks said after the meeting. "I will do my best to improve and strengthen the National Bar Association while I serve as president-elect and president."

Also at the meeting, two Florida State Law graduates won national awards after being named by the NBA and IMPACT as two of the "Nation's Best Advocates: 40 Lawyers Under 40." Inclusion on that list earned lawyers the opportunity to receive votes online for additional NBA awards. Ben Crump ('95) won the NBA's Excellence in Activism Award, which recognizes an individual who utilizes his or her legal background to advance social change. Crump is a partner at Parks & Crump in Tallahassee. Conti Moore ('07) won the Excellence in Service Award, which is given to someone who has a demonstrated record of service in his or her community and/or nonprofit organizations. Moore is a partner at Hylton, Adamson, Watson & Moore, a firm she recently opened in Orlando with three other Florida State Law alumni.

Chinese Professors Visit Law School

Professor Wayne Zhu

During the fall 2010 semester, the law school hosted special guests from the Shaghai Institute of Foreign Trade (SIFT). Professors Wayne Zhu, Jennifer Cheng and Fannie Tan were in Tallahassee for three weeks to build upon their existing relationship with Florida State University.

The SIFT professors are intricately involved in a law school course that connects our students with students at SIFT via a software package that simulates trade negotiations. Professors Cheng and Tan co-teach the International Trade Simulation course with Professor Tahirih Lee. Professors Zhu and Cheng developed the software package that forms the basis of the course. While at the law school, they worked to improve the existing course and to develop a second course, China Trade Simulation.

The professors met with students currently enrolled in the course, with alumni of the course and with members of the law school faculty and administration. Even though students taking the course already gain unique insight into doing business with Chinese partners, being able to talk to the SIFT professors face-to-face was invaluable for those interested in practicing law in China or representing clients with interests in China.

During the weekends, the professors explored Tallahassee and the surrounding area. Their itinerary included visits to the St. Marks National Wildlife Refuge, Florida State's Marine Specimen Laboratory in Panacea and St. George Island.

Pittman Creates Endowment for Law School Scholarship

Sean Pittman

Tallahassee attorney Sean Pittman, a 1994 graduate of Florida State Law, has pledged $100,000 to endow the Sean Pittman Scholarship at the law school. The annual distribution from the Sean Pittman Scholarship shall be used to award at least one scholarship each year to a minority student who also will be provided the opportunity to intern with the Florida Conference of Black State Legislators as a law clerk and policy advisor. The Sean Pittman Scholar must also be interested in pursuing a career in public service. The gift to endowment will be eligible for a 50 percent match from the state of Florida. The state match will be added to the permanent endowment, creating a total endowment of $150,000.

“I am happy and fortunate to be able to support my alma mater,” said Pittman. “I appreciate the College of Law very much and I am hopeful that this gift will assist students who will use their legal education for public service. Our personal investments in education are vital to the future of our communities and our nation.”

“We are extremely grateful for this endowment and also for Sean’s support of Student Affairs and the Seminole Boosters,” said Dean Don Weidner. “He is an all-around champion of Florida State University.”

Pittman is the founder and president of the Pittman Law Group, a corporate law and governmental consulting firm with offices in Tallahassee and Riviera Beach, Florida.

Courtney Seaward Summerlin Scholarship

In memory of one of her classmates, Rochelle Birnbaum Chiocca ('00) has worked to establish the Courtney Seaward Summerlin Oxford Memorial Scholarship with the help of Courtney’s parents, Linda and Gary Seaward. When Summerlin died in April 2009, Chiocca began working to develop the scholarship fund. “I knew that we, her family, friends and colleagues, had to have an avenue through which we could honor the memory of this lovely and caring woman,” said Chiocca.

A commitment has been made to give $25,000 over time to create an endowment; so far, $10,000 has been raised. The endowment will provide a scholarship for one student to attend Oxford each year. Chiocca and Summerlin attended the law school’s summer program at Oxford in 1998. “Remembering how much Courtney cherished her time at Oxford, it seemed fitting to establish a scholarship in her name to enable others to study at the university,” Chiocca explained.

After working in private practice, Summerlin became a professor of legal studies at a Jacksonville college. She died at the age of 34 from complications from a grand mal seizure. Friends who are interested in donating to the fund may do so online at <https://foundation.fsu.edu/community/SSLPage.aspx?pid=815&srcid=838> (designate the gift to “Other” and note the Courtney Seaward Summerlin Oxford Memorial Scholarship).

Students Show School Spirit During Rivalry Week

While most Florida State law students spend the majority of their free time studying during the weeks leading up to exams, that does not mean they don't also make time for fun. In that spirit and in celebration of the annual football game pitting Florida State University against the University of Florida, several law students celebrated Rivalry Week in November. The week was an opportunity for fans of the Gators and Seminoles to compete against each other in support of their teams. The week's events were sponsored by the LitiGators – a group of law students who root for the University of Florida Gators and who, for the most part, earned their undergraduate degrees at the university.

Students decorated the atrium stairwells with streamers – garnet and gold on one side and orange and blue on the other – and hung hand-made signs in support of their teams. Two students – Florida graduate Kim Siomkos and Florida State supporter Lindsay Walton – even dressed up in their team's colors each day of the week.

Rivalry Week events included Spirit Day, a trivia competition, a canned food drive and the Mr. FSU Law Pageant. The highlight of the week was the second annual Powder Puff Football Game. The game, which took place on the law school green, included coaches, mascots and halftime fun. More than 100 fans were in attendance to witness the Seminoles win by 36-0. The Florida State team also swept all other Rivalry Week competitions.

"I am so happy that Rivalry Week was such a success and that people had a great time participating," said Siomkos, a third-year student who is president of the LitiGators. "I am definitely going to miss being a part of this in the future. I'm especially thankful for the continued support of the administration in helping bring our crazy ideas to life. I hope the tradition will live on and that next year the LitiGators will make it even bigger and better."

In addition to hosting Rivalry Week, the LitiGators hold other events that promote fun and camaraderie among students, such as football watching parties and tailgates. According to their Facebook page, the group's goal is "to socialize as Gators, network with the Capital Area Gator Club, and promote the FSU College of Law to UF students who are considering law school."

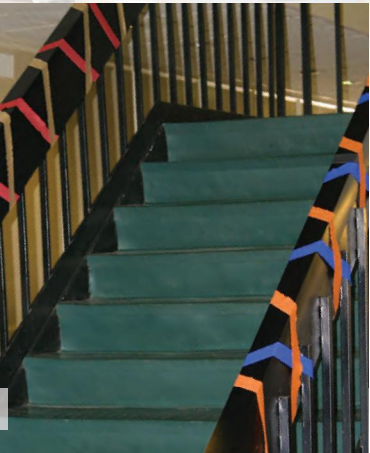

"The LitiGators are an exciting and enthusiastic presence at our school," said Dean Don Weidner. "They have a lot of fun among themselves and help us recruit top students from UF."

Dean's Annual Fundraising Report

DEAR ALUMNI AND FRIENDS:

This was a year of great success for the law school. The reputation of our outstanding students, faculty and alumni continues to blossom. The highlight of recent external recognition was when U.S. News & World Report rated our environmental law program 5th in the nation (up from 11th last year).

Private fundraising made an important difference at the law school, helping us to attract and to retain the best students and faculty. Our Annual Fund has been an unprecedented success and our new major gifts are already making a difference.

ANNUAL GIVING FROM STUDENTS AND ALUMNI

Last year's annual giving hit two new highs: both as to students and as to alumni.

This past year, 81 percent of our students contributed to our Annual Fund. Our student enthusiasm and generosity bodes well for the future. They are blazing the trail for us all!

More than 27 percent of our alumni made cash gifts to the law school — an all-time high of 27.51 percent! This level of alumni support sends a powerful signal about the enthusiasm our alumni have for the school. Based on current American Bar Association data, this level of participation should place us within the nation's top 12 law schools in terms of alumni giving rate.

MAJOR GIFTS

This past year, we received Major Gifts totaling $1,077,660.43 in cash and $546,500.00 in additional pledges, for a grand total of $1,624,160.43. The "Cash Gifts By Level" portion of this report includes only cash payments made during the fiscal year, even if they were but a portion of a larger gift. Under the heading of "Recent Larger Gifts," we outline the larger gift commitments that we received in the 2009-2010 fiscal year.

We are deeply grateful to everyone who has contributed to our many successes. The dollars invested in our school are paying great dividends.

Sincerely,

Don Weidner, Dean

Endowed Gift Opportunities

Endowed Scholarships

Our single greatest need from private giving is endowed scholarships. Our tuition has steadily increased and is likely to continue to do so. To continue to serve our mission of providing access to all, including those from families of modest means, we will need significantly more scholarships. Scholarships are awarded according to the intent of the donor and can be based on merit, need or other factors.

The minimum gift needed to endow a scholarship at Florida State Law is $25,000.

Endowed Professorships and Chairs

Our faculty members have distinguished themselves nationally and internationally as leaders in their fields. Their scholarship is both visible and influential and is helping to enhance the value of a degree from Florida State.

It is critical to retain these extraordinary faculty members at Florida State. Many of them have been pursued by other top schools, both public and private. Just as in the private sector, productivity bonuses make an important difference. Endowed professorships and chairs provide salary supplements based on merit. Faculty members are appointed for five-year terms, with renewal contingent on continued scholarly productivity. The appointee bears the name of the donor or the donor's designee.

The minimum gift needed to endow a professorship at Florida State Law is $200,000. The minimum gift needed to endow a chair at Florida State Law is $1,000,000.

Endowments for Excellence

Endowments for Excellence leave it to the discretion of the school how to spend income earned on endowment.

The minimum gift needed to create an Endowment for Excellence is $25,000.

State Match and Recognition

Gifts to endowment are almost invariably made over time, usually over a five-year period. The state of Florida matches gifts to endowment at incremental ratios, starting with 50 percent for gifts of at least $100,000 and increasing to 100 percent for gifts of $2,000,001 and larger. Inter vivos gifts at $200,000 or more are currently being acknowledged with an oil portrait of the donor or the donor's designee displayed in a prominent place at the law school.

For more information, please contact either Dean Don Weidner at 850.644.3071 or dweidner@law.fsu.edu or Mark Pankey, Associate V.P. for Development, at 850.644.5160 or mpankey@law.fsu.edu.

Tunnicliff ('72) have established the Cynthia and Charles Tunnicliff Endowment for Excellence with an outright gift of $50,000. The income from this endowment shall be used, at the discretion of the law school, for any academic purpose, including student scholarships and faculty support, with special attention given to education in trial practice and the needs of the Mock Trial Team. Cynthia is a shareholder in the Tallahassee law firm of Pennington, Moore, Wilkinson, Bell & Dunbar and focuses her practice on administrative and appellate law. Charles is with the Florida Department of Business and Professional Regulation.

Barbara Jorgenson of Tallahassee pledged to give $30,000 over time to create an endowment to be named the James Reynolds Jorgenson and Frederick Reynolds Jorgenson Endowment for Excellence. The gift honors Barbara's late husband, The Honorable Jim Jorgenson ('69), and her son, Fred Jorgenson ('92). The annual distribution from the James Reynolds Jorgenson and Frederick Reynolds Jorgenson Endowment for Excellence shall be used, at the discretion of the law school, for purposes such as student scholarships, faculty incentives, general discretionary dollars and funding for co-curricular activities such as Law Review, Mock Trial and Moot Court.

Tallahassee alumnus Terry P. Cole ('70) has pledged to renew his support of the Oertel, Fernandez, Cole & Bryant Environmental Law Scholarship with a commitment of $25,000 over time. The annual gift shall be used to award a scholarship each year to a student who has demonstrated interest in pursuing a career in environmental law and who has an outstanding academic record. The Oertel, Fernandez, Cole & Bryant Scholar will be offered a summer clerkship with the firm after the recipient's first year of law school. Terry is a partner in the Tallahassee firm of Oertel, Fernandez, Cole & Bryant. Terry's practice focuses on environmental law and administrative law.

Tampa couple A. Anderson B. Dogali ('86) and Hope Dogali ('86) have established the Andy & Hope Dogali Endowment for Excellence by pledging $25,000. The income from this endowment shall be used, at the discretion of the law school, for purposes such as student scholarships, faculty incentives, general discretionary dollars and funding for co-curricular activities such as Law Review, Mock Trial and Moot Court.

Andy, co-founder of Forizs & Dogali, P.A., practices insurance defense and construction law. Hope, also a partner in Forizs & Dogali, P.A., devotes much of her practice to real estate matters.

Enrico G. Gonzalez ('90) has agreed to establish the Enrico G. Gonzalez Endowment for Law Review by pledging $25,000 over time. The income from this endowment shall be used to benefit the Law Review. Rico is a solo practitioner who focuses on banking and finance law; his office is located in Temple Terrace, Florida.

Gary Seaward of Stuart, Florida has made a $25,000 commitment to be paid over time to create the Courtney Seaward Summerlin Oxford Memorial Scholarship. This scholarship is made in memory of his daughter, Courtney Seaward Summerlin ('00). The income from this endowment will be used to award at least one scholarship each year to a student to study abroad with the law school's Summer Program in Law at the University of Oxford in England.

SEND US YOUR NEWS

The most avidly read section of Florida State Law is "Class Action." The law school's more than 7,500 alumni want to know what their classmates have been doing — awards they have received, high-profile cases they have won, law firms or cities they have moved to, pro bono activities they have undertaken and more. Just as important: Did you get married? Have a baby? Write a novel? Run a marathon? Perform in a band?

If you have anything that you would like to include in Class Action, please send information to alumni@law.fsu.edu or mail this form to:

Law School Hosts Two National Conferences This Year

Florida State University College of Law is the site of two national conferences during this academic year. The first, “The Constitution in 2020: The Future of Criminal Justice,” was hosted October 7-8 by the law school and the American Constitution Society for Law and Policy. In the spring, the school will be the site of a “Symposium on Civil Recourse Theory.”

The Constitution in 2020: The Future of Criminal Justice

The fall symposium was coordinated by the criminal law faculty of the law school and featured a keynote address by Stephen B. Bright. Bright is president and senior counsel for the Southern Center for Human Rights; he also teaches at Harvard University and Yale University Law Schools and the Georgetown University Law Center. The Honorable Lynn Adelman, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Wisconsin, presented a lunch Q&A.

The four panels were National Security and Liberty, Crime Control and Equality, Citizenship and Community, and Punishment and the Constitution.

Panelists and moderators included:

- Jack Balkin, Yale Law School
- Susan Bandes, DePaul University College of Law/Florida State University College of Law
- Doug Berman, The Ohio State University Moritz College of Law
- Darryl Brown, University of Virginia School of Law

- Tony Sebok, Cardozo School of Law
- Emily Sherwin, Cornell University Law School
- Jason Solomon, William & Mary Law School
- Ernest Weinrib, University of Toronto Faculty of Law
- Ben Zipursky, Fordham University School of Law

Topics will include Civil Recourse vs. Corrective Justice; Political Theory of Recourse; Contracts and Civil Recourse; Relational Duties; Recourse, Revenge, Redress, Remedy; and Recourse and Justice. For more information about the upcoming conference, contact Bridgeman at cbridgem@law.fsu.edu or 850.644.6075.

Abbott Provides World-Renowned Advice by Video Conference

According to Dean Don Weidner, “Officials on four continents seek Professor Frederick M. Abbott’s advice.” He often testifies before world courts and governments about international intellectual property rights and global economic issues. Thanks to new video conferencing equipment installed in the library, he occasionally testifies before these entities from within the walls of the College of Law. Recently, Abbott testified before the European Union and Indian governments through this advanced technology. He also has presented long-distance class lectures when his presence at other locations has been necessary.

Dean Weidner is very pleased with the use of technology to enhance the impact of the faculty. The law school also is aggressively pursuing placement interviews and Networking Noshes with alumni through the same technology.

Three New Professors Join Faculty

Reid G. Fontaine

David E. Landau

Jake Linford

Florida State University College of Law proudly welcomed three new faculty members this summer. Reid G. Fontaine, David E. Landau and Jake Linford add to the vibrant community of scholars that was ranked in 2010 by Leiter Law School Rankings as the nation's 23rd best in terms of per capita scholarly impact.

Professor Fontaine teaches Criminal Law, Juvenile Justice and Law & Psychology. His scholarship focuses on criminal law and interdisciplinary law and behavioral science. Professor Fontaine's book, The Mind of the Criminal: The Role of Social Cognition in Criminal Law (Cambridge University Press), is forthcoming in 2011. Before joining the law school community, he was jointly appointed in the Department of Psychology and the James E. Rogers College of Law at the University of Arizona and was a Fulbright Senior Scholar and Visiting Professor at the University of Rome. He also has been a research scientist for the Duke University Sanford Institute for Public Policy Studies and clinical director and supervising psychologist for the Devereux Foundation. Professor Fontaine attended the University of Pennsylvania Law School and earned a Ph.D. in psychology from Duke University.

Professor Landau joins the faculty from Harvard Law where he was a Climenko Fellow and Lecturer on Law as well as a Presidential Scholar in the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences. As a student at Harvard Law, he served as notes editor for the Harvard Law Review. After law school, Landau clerked for the Honorable Sandra L. Lynch of the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit. He plans to complete his Ph.D. in government from Harvard in 2011. Professor Landau teaches Civil Procedure, Comparative Constitutional Law and Conflict of Laws and writes about comparative constitutional jurisprudence and civil procedure.

Prior to joining the Florida State law faculty, Professor Linford litigated copyright and trademark matters with the law firm of Pattishall, McAuliffe, Newbury, Hilliard & Geraldson, LLP, in Chicago. He also clerked for the Honorable M. Margaret McKeown of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. He received his J.D. from the University of Chicago, where he was a member of The University of Chicago Law Review, graduated with high honors and was elected to the Order of the Coif. He teaches Bioethics and the Law, Contracts and Copyright Law. His scholarship focuses on intellectual property, contracts, commercial transactions & sales, and health law.

Impactful Faculty

An article by professors at the University of St. Thomas law school, "Scholarly Impact of Law School Faculties: Extending the Leiter Rankings to the Top 70," ranks Florida State's law faculty the 23rd best in the nation in terms of per capita scholarly impact (tied with Emory and the University of California at Davis). The authors state: "As informed observers know, and as confirmed by its Scholarly Impact Score in the Top 25, Florida State's law faculty has developed into a nationally-prominent and highly productive group of scholars. If the U.S. News academic reputation survey, as well as its overall ranking, does not soon assign Florida State a solid position within the coveted top fifty, the U.S. News ranking methodology may be questioned as less-than-fully responsive to genuine changes in a law school's quality." The article builds upon an earlier ranking by University of Chicago law school professor Brian Leiter that rates Florida State's law faculty the nation's 23rd best in terms of per capita scholarly impact.

SBA Wins Third National Award in Three Years

Andrew Fay ('10)

The Florida State University College of Law's Student Bar Association (SBA) won the American Bar Association (ABA) Law Student Division's 2010 Public Interest National Achievement Award. The student-led organization received the award for its community service efforts throughout the past year. According to the ABA, the award recognizes law students and law schools who have made outstanding contributions to underrepresented groups or public interest causes outside the law school and/or in public service at the law school. Florida State was one of 15 schools nominated for the honor.

"This award exemplifies our student body's commitment, not only to academic excellence, but also to giving back to our community and the legal profession," said Andrew Fay ('10), who served as the 2009-2010 SBA president.

During the 2009-2010 academic year, SBA created the Volunteer Law Student Project, a program that allows Florida State law students to work directly on pro bono cases that have been assigned to local attorneys. SBA raised funds to benefit the American Heart Association, ALS research, children in Sierra Leone and the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation. The group also donated to the community more than 150 items obtained through its winter clothing drive and more than 100 pounds of canned food.

"We are thrilled to be recognized for the service of our Student Bar Association," said Dean Don Weidner. "Congratulations and thanks go to the entire SBA board and especially to its president, Andrew Fay, for bringing this honor home to Florida State."

This is the third year in a row the Florida State SBA has won a national award from the ABA Law Student Division. In 2008 and 2009, the group named Florida State's Student Bar Association the "SBA of the Year."

The ABA presented the award to Florida State during its annual conference in San Francisco on Saturday, August 7. One-hundred-fifteen law schools attended the conference.

Seven Land Federal Clerkships

Seven third-year students recently accepted federal clerkships to begin following graduation in 2011.

Nathan Hill
Judge Gregory A. Presnell, U.S. District Court for the Middle District of Florida, Orlando Division

Salomon Laguerre
Judge Mary S. Scriven ('87), U.S. District Court for the Middle District of Florida, Orlando Division

Sara Mason
Judge John Richard Smoak, Jr., U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Florida, Panama City Division

Courtney McCormick
Chief Judge Lewis M. Killian, Jr. ('76), U.S. Bankruptcy Court, Northern District of Florida, Tallahassee

Law School Hosts Prominent Visitors

Judge Thomas B. Griffith

Several judges and a federal official made visits to the College of Law during the fall semester. They included Florida Supreme Court Chief Justice Charles Canady, The Honorable Thomas B. Griffith, CIA officer Valeria O. Patterson ('85), The Honorable Stephen T. Brown and The Honorable Timothy J. Corrigan.

Chief Justice Canady's August visit was sponsored by the student chapter of the Federalist Society. He presented a lecture, "Judging and the Rule of Law," open to the entire student body. Judge Griffith, of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, met with a small group of students for breakfast, made remarks to the faculty and spoke at a Lunch and Q&A in September. Also in September, Judge Brown, who is chief magistrate judge of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida, visited the law school. He met with a group of Law Review students, made remarks to the faculty and presented a lunch and Q&A for students.

Patterson, who is CIA Officer in Residence at West Virginia University, visited in September. Prior to her current appointment, she was chief of the Administrative Law Division in the Office of the General Counsel at the CIA, where she managed a legal team that provided guidance on a full range of administrative law issues. She also is a fiction writer and her first work for teens, The Other Side of Blue, was published recently. During her visit, she spoke with a small group of students during a Networking Nosh and she had individual appointments with students.

In October, Judge Corrigan was the final Jurist-in-Residence of the semester. He had breakfast with a small group of students, met with an environmental law class and met with the faculty. Additionally, the U.S. District Judge for the Middle District of Florida spoke at a lunch and Q&A with approximately 40 students.

Miller Joins Administration of Law School

Catherine J. Miller

Catherine J. Miller is the new assistant dean for administration at the College of Law. She is a familiar face to many at the law school; she joined the staff in 2005. She first served as an administrative assistant to the associate deans for administration and academic affairs and later became the executive support assistant to Dean Don Weidner.

She brings to the position a wealth of institutional knowledge and prior experience in large office relocations. She has been intricately involved in the planning process for the law school's expansion into the former First District Court of Appeal building. Before joining the law school, Dean Miller was a development specialist for the Florida School Boards Association, where she developed and implemented training modules for school board members and school district personnel throughout Florida.

Eric Pendergraft
Judge Erik P. Kimball, U.S. Bankruptcy Court, Southern District of Florida, West Palm Beach

Tiffany Roddenberry
Chief Judge Robert Hinkle, U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Florida, Tallahassee Division

Lauren Vickroy
Chief Judge Robert Hinkle, U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Florida, Tallahassee Division

Student Notes

In addition to excelling at the law school, many College of Law students are recognized externally for their work. Below is a list of recent student achievements.

Safiah Afify (2L)

Terin Barbas (3L)

Tessa Davis (3L)

JoAnna Piscitello (3L)

Elizete Velado (2L)

Melanie Leitman (3L)

Anette Rasco (3L)

Safiah Afify (2L) was selected to receive the 2010 Florida State University Global Citizen Award, which is presented annually to two students who exemplify global citizenship by building relationships across cultures and fostering global awareness and mutual understanding on campus.

Terin Barbas (3L) was awarded second place in the 2010 ABA Section of Real Property, Trust & Estate Law Student Writing Contest. The achievement earned her $1,500, free section membership for one year and a chance for her essay to be published in the Real Property, Trust & Estate Law Journal.

Lori Beail-Farkas (2L) and Rachel Davidson (3L) were selected by the American Bar Association's Section on Environment, Energy, and Resources to be student volunteers at the Eastern Water Law Conference. The conference was May 19-20 in Orlando.

Roger "Beau" Beaubien (2L) and Tara Klimek (2L) were selected by Gov. Charlie Crist as 2010 Gubernatorial Fellows. The program immerses students in key areas of government, giving future leaders firsthand, high-level training as well as valuable experience and insight into government and how it works.

Christian Cutillo (3L) published a paper, "A Toxic Reciprocity: Examining the E-Waste Stream from the United States to China," in the Harvard Law & Policy Review Online.

Tessa Davis (3L) is publishing a paper in the Journal of Transnational Law & Policy.

Itasca Goode (3L), Angela Hensel (3L), Corinne Koeppen (3L), Rebecca Lowrance (3L), JoAnna Piscitello (3L) and Elizete Velado (2L) were selected from a pool of nearly 270 applicants as 2010 Legal Services Summer Fellows by The Florida Bar Foundation. As fellows, they worked at Foundation-supported legal aid programs this past summer.

Justin Howard (3L) wrote an opinion piece that appeared in the July 17, 2010, edition of The Tampa Tribune. Howard, a certified legal intern for the Health Care Access Project at the Public Interest Law Center, wrote "Proposed rule harmful to the disabled" about a rule change being considered by the Florida Agency for Persons with Disabilities.

Gina Iacona (3L) is publishing "Going Green to Make Green: Necessary Changes to Promote and Implement Corporate Social Responsibility While Increasing the Bottom Line" in the Journal of Land Use & Environmental Law.

Brian Kenyon (3L) is the Law Student Division liaison to the American Bar Association Section on Environment, Energy, and Resources. His ABA experience has translated into a summer job in Washington, D.C., working for an administrative law judge at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Melanie Leitman (3L) placed her paper, "Water Rx: The Problem of Pharmaceuticals in Our Nation's Waters" in the UCLA Journal of Environmental Law and Policy. It also was a feature article for the Food and Drug Law Institute's Update magazine.

Rebecca Lowrance (3L) received an ABA Diversity Fellowship in Environmental Law to work at the Everglades Law Center.

Jon Harris Maurer (2L) was chosen as a Young Law Scholar by the American Bar Association Section on Environment, Energy, and Resources, which entitled him to attend the section's annual fall meeting in New Orleans in September.

Dane Norman (3L) worked during the summer of 2010 on a housing discrimination research project for Vermont Legal Aid.

Anette Rasco (3L) received a Cuban American Bar Association Scholarship. The scholarship is awarded annually to students who have made a significant impact on the Cuban community.

The Honorable Mary S. Scriven, of the United States District Court for the Middle District of Florida, was the featured speaker for the spring 2010 College of Law commencement ceremony. Scriven, a 1987 graduate of the law school, encouraged graduates to learn from their mistakes, continue learning from the myriad of opportunities they are presented and behave ethically in their professional and personal lives.

TOP RANKINGS...

Our fall 2010 entering class had an average LSAT score of 162 with a 164 at the 75th percentile and a 161 at the 25th percentile (the highest LSAT scores in the state of Florida).

For the past seven years, we have been ranked one of the nation's top 10 law schools for Hispanic students by Hispanic Business magazine.

The National Jurist magazine (2010) ranks us the nation's 8th "Best Value" law school, based on employment rate, bar passage, tuition and indebtedness.
