This Career Development Handbook is designed to provide an introduction to the many services provided by the Placement Office at Florida State University College of Law. It is intended to be a collection of information to assist you with the many phases of a job search. This handbook is available in alternate formats; please contact the Placement Office for more information.

The Placement Office staff is here to assist you as you make your way through law school and beyond. Our mission is to provide law students with the tools they will need to facilitate successful job searches and connect with employers.
The Placement Office has been extremely effective. Within nine months of graduation, 89.2% of the Class of 2012 was employed, with an additional 3.15% pursuing further graduate studies. This success is attributed to the networking activities hosted by the office, the school’s active alumni, and the office’s diligent efforts to track graduates which include exit interviews and visits to the Florida Bar Examination site every February and July.
SERVICES

The office offers a full range of services to students, alumni, and potential employers. These services include, but are not limited to:

Career Bulletins: The Placement Office exchanges monthly alumni job bulletins with a number of law schools around the country. These bulletins typically include a collection of recent job listings in each school’s geographic location, which can be useful if you are targeting a specific location. The job bulletins are posted to https://www.law2.byu.edu/Career_Services/jobbank/jobbank.html. Contact the Placement Office for a username and password.

Career Counseling: The Placement Office staff welcomes students and alumni to discuss any career-related issues (i.e. salary negotiations, interviewing techniques, resume review). Contact the Placement Office to make an appointment.

Job Listings: Florida State Law offers students and alumni access to all of our job postings online through Symplicity (https://law-fsu-csm.symplicity.com/students/). Contact the Placement Office for a username and password.

Networking Noshes: Alumni from all over the state and country come to the law school and participate in this luncheon series. We usually limit Noshes to 10-15 students to maintain a small group setting, which encourages students and alumni participants to interact in a lively discussion. Nosh topics have included the following:

- “Federal Judicial Clerkships”
- “What Kind of Lawyer Do I Want To Be”
- “Young Attorney Working in Government”
- “Out of State Career Opportunities”
- “Careers in Washington, DC”
- “The Employer’s Perspective on Resumes”
- “Jury Selection to the Closing Argument”
- “Women in Litigation”
- “Hot Practice Area: Collections”
- “What Not To Do in the Courtroom”

Placement Mentors (Alumni): College of Law alumni are encouraged to become Placement Mentors. They advise students and other alumni about job search strategies, particularly in their geographic area and practice areas. The Placement Mentor Directory is found on the Placement Office website.

Reciprocity: Reciprocity allows students and alumni interested in obtaining employment in other states, cities, or regions to use career facilities located at law schools in those geographic areas. For example, if you wanted to move to New York, then our office could set up a reciprocity agreement with Columbia University that would allow you to use their career placement facilities. Please note that law schools are not required to extend reciprocity and many law schools deny reciprocity during the fall semester or they deny reciprocity because they receive too many requests. For more information on reciprocity, please contact the Placement Office.

Statistical Information: Students and recent graduates are asked to inform the Placement Office of all accepted offers of employment and salary. This is particularly important after students graduate because our office is required to report recent graduate statistics that are used in law school rankings. Additionally, we often have requests from alumni, students and employers for this type of statistical information. Individual student identifying information (i.e. name, address) is kept confidential.

Workshops and Presentations: Throughout the academic year, the Placement Office conducts workshops and presentations on various subjects and topics. The following are a sample of events that have been conducted in the past: Basic and Advanced Resume and Cover Letters; Interviewing Skills; Mach Speed, Mock Interviews; Careers as a Plaintiff’s Attorney; Practicing in Miami; Practicing in Jacksonville; Judicial Clerkships; and Nuts and Bolts of Networking.
ABOUT RECIPROCITY

If you are looking for employment in cities in Florida other than Tallahassee, or even out of state, the Florida State Law Placement Office can assist you in requesting reciprocity to access another law school’s career services office. To begin the process, go to the career services webpage of the law school you are seeking to have reciprocity granted to find out if their reciprocity policy would help you. Some schools will only grant reciprocity to their facilities and not their job placement software so read the school’s reciprocity policy carefully. Additionally, most schools have “blackout dates” restricting Reciprocity to non-“OCI” time periods, and a significant number of law schools offer reciprocity only on a one-to-one basis.

Many times, law schools do not have students/alumni interested in our services, and therefore, they will deny our requests. Please be aware that some law schools do not have reciprocity policies available or do not honor this process at all. Please contact the Placement Office if you have any questions about reciprocity.

REQUESTING RECIPROCITY

Once you find a law school whose reciprocity policy will help you, do not contact the other law school. Instead, send the following information to the Placement Office at placement@law.fsu.edu:

1. Full name
2. Mailing address
3. Preferred e-mail address
4. Phone number
5. STUDENTS: Month/Year of anticipated graduation
   ALUMNI: Month/Year graduated
6. Law School you wish to receive reciprocity of services (if more than one, list laws schools in order of preference)

Please allow 1-2 days to receive a response to your request. You will be copied on correspondence sent to the law school of your choice. Typically, other law schools will send their responses directly to you and copy our office within 1-2 weeks.
On-Campus Interviews Program

One of the most effective ways employers recruit our students is through our Fall and Spring On-Campus Interview (OCI) programs. OCI provides legal employers the opportunity to interview law students for full-time and part-time law clerk, intern, or associate positions. Students may view participating employers, submit their resumes, and sign up for interview times through their Symplicity account.

OCI means that the employer is already scheduled to come to campus and interview students. If you know that you are not going to be in town when the employer is here, please do not submit or “drop” your application materials via Symplicity. If you are still interested in that employer, you can contact the Placement Office, and the Placement Office will help forward your materials to the employer explaining that you can meet the employer on a different date, either in person or via video/telephone.

Resume Referral or Resume Collect

Resume referral means the employer has not yet decided to come to campus to interview students but the employer is interested in receiving application materials from our students. In the past, some employers first like to receive application materials, will review those students, and then decide whether or not they want to schedule a time to come to campus or schedule interviews via video/telephone. If you are interested in any of the employers who have Resume Referrals set up, submit your application materials through Symplicity for that employer. If the employer decides to interview our students, they will either reach out to you individually or through our office.
FIRST–YEAR TIMETABLE

1L Fall Semester

September/October

- Focus on academics during first semester because of the relationship to future career options. Your grades and class rank will play a big role in securing employment opportunities.
- Edit all Facebook and Twitter profiles so that they are “employer friendly” and change your settings to “Private.” Scrutinize who has access to your web pages.
- Create a professional personal email address. (i.e. firstname.lastname@yahoo.com)
- Attend Homecoming events and start getting to know some of our alumni.
- Attend mandatory career planning orientation session. This session is designed to give you a brief introduction to the Placement Office and its services.
- Attend at least 1 Networking Nosh luncheon during the Fall Semester.

November

- Submit your resume to the Placement Office for review. Then upload your “improved” resume to Symplicity.
- Attend Placement Office workshops, i.e. resume writing, and networking events.
- Sign up, fill in your profile completely, and begin to use Symplicity (https://law-fsu-csm.syplicity.com/students/).
- Review this Career Development Handbook.
- Create a basic cover letter.
- Think about what you would like to do the summer between your first year of law school and second year of law school. Some students choose to work, while others attend summer school, participate in a foreign study program, or simply do something “non-legal.”
- If you are interested in working the summer between your first year of law school and second year of law school, begin to identify potential legal employers and geographic locations. Please note that public interest organizations, governmental agencies, and smaller firms are more likely to hire 1Ls.
- Set up an appointment with the staff in the Placement Office to assist you in identifying summer opportunities.
- Begin checking Symplicity and your e-mails from the Placement Office regarding summer job opportunities, internships and fellowships.

December

- Finalize your resume and cover letter and upload it to Symplicity. Be sure you have someone independently review your resume for misspellings, grammatical errors, and formatting.
- Mail cover letter and resume to legal employers with the goal of obtaining interviews over semester break.
- Discuss with friends and family possible contacts in the legal community where you would like to work. Schedule informational interviews. Network to identify possible employers.
FIRST-YEAR TIMETABLE

1L Spring Semester

January/February
- E-mail or meet with Placement Office staff to discuss status of job search efforts. Update resume based on first semester grades and class rank.
- Continue checking Symplicity and your e-mails from the Placement Office.
- Continue targeted mailings to employers.
- Follow-up with phone calls on the resumes you have sent out.
- Attend Career Planning activities and workshops, including Spring On-Campus Interviewing (“OCI”) Orientation.
- Participate in Spring OCI.
- Attend the annual Board of Visitors events and continue to network with our alumni.
- Arrange possible interviews over Spring Break.

March/April
- Finalize summer plans and find suitable housing.
- Advise Placement Office of your summer plans and provide the office with your summer address.
- Continue to network in the legal community!
- Meet with the Placement Office staff to discuss how to maximize your summer experience and to plan for the fall of your second year.
- Prepare for Fall OCI by attending the Placement Office OCI Orientation and meeting with Placement Office staff to discuss interviewing skills. Fall OCI begins two-weeks before the start of fall classes, so plan your summer travel accordingly.

1L Summer
- Begin preparing for fall recruiting season.
- Review the online OCI Orientation.
- Update your resume with first-year grades, activities and your summer experience. Be sure to upload your updated resume onto Symplicity.
- Begin establishing references through law professors and legal employers.
- Narrow your focus of interest both geographically and by area of practice.
- Begin to read the Second-Year Timetable.
- Employers will begin interviewing students at FSU for Fall OCI in early August before school starts so plan to return to Tallahassee at that time. You will also want to make sure you have internet access in July because that is when you will begin electronically submitting your resume to these employers.
SECOND-YEAR TIMELINE

Summer Prior to 2L Year

- Maximize your summer experience. Prepare a summary of your experience including work product, contacts and areas exposed to during the summer.
- Develop a writing sample. Obtain permission from supervising attorney to use work product during interviews and appropriately mask any client-identifying information.
- Develop a good working relationship with the attorneys you work for and ask their permission for you to use them as references.
- Identify potential employers who you have met during the summer for possible follow-up during fall semester.
- Update your resume based on summer experience. Be sure to upload your updated resume onto Symplicity (https://law-fsu-csm.symplicity.com/students/).
- Check Symplicity and your e-mails from the Placement Office for information on On-Campus Interviewing (“OCI”) which begins in early August. The Placement Office will send you an e-mail which will have information about all fall recruiting programs, including OCI.
- Begin submitting materials to Placement Office for fall recruiting. Drop dates can begin as early as July!

2L Fall Semester

August/September

- Attend Placement Office Orientations.
- Mark calendar to attend career presentations and workshops.
- Sign the mandatory “Employment & Duty to Disclose Form” (ABA agreement not to work more than 20 hrs. per week while taking a full credit load of classes).
- Apply directly to employers of interest who do not participate in the College of Law’s fall recruiting activities. Identify time frames for potential on-site interviews (e.g., winter break).
- Prepare for interviews by attending career services workshops and reviewing sample interview questions.
- Attend Interview Programs to help prepare you for upcoming interviews.
- Review the Government Honors & Internship Handbook for early deadlines.

October

- Begin researching employers for targeted mailing. Identify employers and have cover letters reviewed by Placement Office.
- Plan follow-up strategy for all applications.
- Register and attend Public Interest Job Fair in Washington, D.C. (Equal Justice Works).
- Review judicial clerkship materials on file in the Placement Office.
- Begin preparing cover letter, writing sample, and request references for federal and state judicial clerkships.
- Network! Network! Network!

November/December

- Schedule interviews with potential employers over winter break.
- Meet with Placement Office staff to discuss status and review options for expanding job search.
- Contact potential public interest employers and sponsors for summer fellowships/work-study.
SECOND-YEAR TIMELINE

2L Spring Semester

January
- Begin researching federal judges you might be interested in working for after graduation.
- Review job notices posted on Symplicity.
- Update resume and upload it to Symplicity.
- Attend orientation session for Spring OCI.
- Begin submitting your resume to employers for Spring OCI.

February
- Continue to check Symplicity for job postings.
- Attend Placement Office workshops and seminars.
- Attend Board of Visitor activities.
- Expand search to smaller employers.

March
- Attend Federal Judicial Clerkship workshops and presentation.
- Continue to check Symplicity for job postings.
- Prepare application materials for state courts selecting judicial clerks during the spring semester.
- Contact employers to confirm start date and express continued interest in that employer. Locate suitable housing.
- Prepare for spring interviews held for some judicial clerkship positions (both federal and state) at judges’ offices.
- Mark your calendars for the South Eastern Minority Job Fair (“SEMJF”). SEMJF takes place in Atlanta, Georgia, during July or August. Check with the Placement Office for registration deadlines and information.

April/May
- Advise Placement Office of your summer job/address.
- Meet with Placement Office staff to discuss maximizing your summer experience and to plan for the fall of your third year.

2L Summer

- Maximize your summer experience. Prepare summary of your experience including work product, contacts and areas exposed to during the summer.
- Develop a writing sample. Obtain permission from supervising attorney to use work product during interviews and appropriately redact any client information.
- Develop a good working relationship with the attorneys you work for and ask their permission for you to use them as references.
- Identify potential employers who you have met during the summer for possible follow-up during fall semester.
- Update your resume based on summer experience and upload it to Symplicity.
SECOND-YEAR TIMELINE

- Update your profile on Symplicity.
- Apply for Federal Judicial Clerkships!
- Check Symplicity and e-mails from Placement Office for information on On-Campus Interviewing (“OCI”) which begins in early August. The Placement Office will send you an e-mail with information on fall recruiting programs, including OCI.
- Employers will begin interviewing students at FSU for Fall OCI in early August before school starts so plan to return to Tallahassee at that time. You will also want to make sure you have internet access in July because that is when you will begin electronically submitting your resume to these employers.
THIRD-YEAR TIMELINE

3L Fall Semester

August/September
- Mark calendar to attend career presentations and workshops.
- Attend Placement Office Orientations.
- Apply directly to employers of interest who do not participate in the College of Law’s fall recruiting activities. Identify time frames for potential on-site interviews (e.g., winter break).
- Prepare for interviews by attending career services workshops and reviewing sample interview questions.
- Apply to government agencies (e.g., DOJ, IRS, SEC, Attorney General) offering honors programs. Review the Government Honors & Internship Handbook for deadlines.
- Attend Interview programming to help prepare you for upcoming interviews.

October
- Begin researching employers for targeted mailing. Identify employers and have cover letters reviewed by Placement Office.
- Plan follow-up strategy for all applications.

November/December
- Begin preparing cover letter, writing sample and request references for state judicial clerkships. Schedule interviews with potential employers over winter break.
- Meet with Placement Office staff to discuss your status and review options for expanding job search.

3L Spring Semester

January
- Expand search to include smaller firms and government agencies.
- Continue to check Symplicity for job postings and networking opportunities.
- Update resume.
- Attend orientation session for Spring OCI.
- Begin dropping resumes for Spring OCI.

February
- Continue to review job notices from Placement Office.
- Attend workshops and seminars hosted by Placement Office.
- Expand search to non-traditional employers (insurance companies, banks, consulting firms and corporations) who tend to hire in the spring.
THIRD-YEAR TIMELINE

March
- Continue to review job notices from Placement Office.
- Finalize state bar plans.
- Expand search activities as needed. Mail to smaller firms and government agencies focusing on bar plans and geographic location. Follow-up with visits to employers and make contacts with local bar associations.
- Contact employers to confirm start date and express continued interest in that employer. Locate suitable housing.
- Schedule and attend Exit Interviews with FSU staff.

April/May
- Advise Placement Office of your permanent position and provide updated contact information and permanent e-mail address. Update your profile information on Symplicity.
- Plan strategy for post-bar job search.
- Continue to check Symplicity and e-mails from Placement Office.

POST GRADUATION
- Sign up to be a Placement Mentor with the Alumni Office (http://law.fsu.edu/placement/mentor_form.html).
- Update Placement Office regarding your employment status.
Self-Evaluation

Your law degree offers you a wide range of career choices. You should begin to think about career options soon after entering law school. Searching for a job is highly personal, and some decisions about your career path must be made before you begin your job search. You must be prepared to spend as much time and energy looking for a job as you do preparing for class. It is important to realize that searching for a job is often a full-time job in itself.

A variety of positions are available to lawyers in different specialties working for many types of employers. Seek out information about these options by using placement library resources, talking to professors and lawyers you know, and attending career workshops and networking events.

Once you establish your career goals, you will need to be organized, flexible, and patient about achieving them. You can pave the way to a rewarding and fulfilling career by spending time on your career planning while in law school.

The first step in your job search is that of self-evaluation.

There are many books and Internet personality tests (i.e. Myers-Briggs Type Indicator) than can assist you with self-evaluation. Self-evaluation resources can help you identify your personal and career goals, as well as a realistic appraisal of your strengths, weaknesses, abilities and skills.

Defining personal goals includes finding the answers to broad questions such as:

- What do I want out of life?
- What am I passionate about?
- What is really important to me?
- What are my values?
- How does work fit into my personal lifestyle?
- Do I want to work nights and weekends?
- How much time do I want to give to my family and friends?
- Which leisure activities do I want to pursue?

Ask yourself other questions to assist in your decision-making:

- Where do I want to live?
- Do I want to live in a metropolitan area?
- Do I want to live in a small town?
- Do I want to live in a certain area because of my family?

Answers to these questions will be extremely important to employers interviewing you for a permanent position. Many employers are interested in hiring students or graduates who have strong ties to their geographic location or community.

Finally, take an objective look at your abilities and skills, your strengths and weaknesses. In evaluating yourself you must be extremely candid; in other words, you must know yourself. When doing your skills analysis, ask yourself the following questions to help determine your interests or focus.

- What are the skills I would like to use in a job?
- Do I enjoy speaking in front of people?
- Do I communicate well orally?
- Does my real strength lie in written communication?
- Am I organized and persistent?
- Am I punctual and responsible?
Skills identification is very important and most people do not understand the great number of valuable skills they actually possess. There are three types of basic skills: functional, work content and self-management.

Functional skills characterize your ability to process data, information, people and things. Such skills are fairly easily transferable from one job to another. They are the “ing” skills, such as “organizing” and “communicating.”

Work content skills, also referred to as Professional or Technical Skills, are the skills that are very specific to an occupation. These skills are what you technically know that enables you to do the job. These “hard” skills are often identified as "qualifications" for specific jobs. These skills are often learned through on-the-job training or in specific courses in your degree program. By going to law school you are acquiring some of the work content skills necessary to be a lawyer. These skills are the ones potential employers give the strongest consideration.

Self-management skills are those you control yourself with respect to change, time, dress, authority, and personal demeanor.

Skills identification and self-assessment are difficult, time-consuming, and frequently overlooked by job-seekers. You should, however, devote considerable time and effort to this segment of your career.

After you consider available opportunities and assess your goals and abilities, you must determine the types of positions for which you are best suited. Then, evaluate yourself in terms of the available market. Every time you consider a new job opening, you will have to ask yourself these three questions:

- What type of person and skills does this employer need?
- How do my talents, skills, and interests meet this need?
  - Is this position right for me?

Resources

The Placement Office houses a variety of resources that can assist you in your self-evaluation and job search. We also have computers accessible for student use. Listed below are resources you can use for self-evaluation.

Publications

- The Official Guide to Legal Specialties, Lisa L. Abrams, J.D.
- The Best of the Job Goddess, Kimm Alayne Walton, J.D.
- From Law School to Law Practice, Suzanne O’Neill and Catherine Gerhauser Sparkman

DIFFERENT WAYS TO GAIN EXPERIENCE

Students who gain work experience while in law school are more likely to obtain jobs upon graduation. Not only do they better understand the information being presented in the classroom, they also learn critical skills and meet attorneys in areas in which they may want to practice. There are numerous ways to gain work experience, listed below, and most students utilize more than one.

- Paid employment—There are paid employment opportunities available throughout the legal community for students to gain work experience while receiving assistance in funding their legal education. Students can search for paid employment through the Placement Office and Symplicity (https://law-fsu-csm.symplicity.com/), or through outside methods (http://www.law.fsu.edu/placement/alumniinfo.html).

- Externship—Florida State Law offers an extensive clinical externship program, which allows students to earn academic credit while gaining work experience. There are opportunities available in government agencies, judicial settings, State Attorney Offices, Public Defender Offices, Legal Aid, and public interest offices. More information on externship opportunities is available at http://www.law.fsu.edu/academic_programs/jd_program/clinics/.

- Public Interest Law Center—The Public Interest Law Center is essentially a student law firm that represents indigent clients with various types of legal needs. There are three clinics within the Public Interest Law Center: the Children’s Advocacy Center Clinic, the Family Law Clinic, and the Medical Legal Partnership Clinic. Students are given the opportunity to operate as an attorney with the primary responsibility for cases, and receive up to six credits for the spring and fall semesters, and three credits for the summer semester. More information on the Public Interest Law Center is available at http://www.law.fsu.edu/academic_programs/jd_program/cac/.

- Research Internship—Up to two academic credits are available for students engaging in a research internship. A research internship is an opportunity for students to explore an area of special legal interest based on a substantial research and writing effort (a research paper or legal memoranda, briefs, etc.), and 120 hours of work experience in an actual practice setting. The research internship gives students the opportunity to practice in a broad range of legal settings and further develop research and writing skills. More information is available at http://www.law.fsu.edu/academic_programs/curriculum/Internship.pdf.

- Pro Bono Volunteer—All Florida State law students are required to perform a minimum of 20 hours of pro bono legal work during their second or third year of law school, and many students do more. Pro bono legal work is defined as “work on behalf of indigent individuals or other uncompensated legal work in conjunction with an individual lawyer, law firm or organization on behalf of a disadvantaged minority, the victims of racial, sexual, other forms of discrimination, those denied human and civil rights, or other work on behalf of the public interest.” Pro bono legal work can be an excellent opportunity to gain work experience and network with legal professionals. More information is available at http://www.law.fsu.edu/current_students/student_affairs/pro_bono.html.

- Volunteer—Many opportunities to gain work experience are unpaid. Though an opportunity may be unpaid, it still may offer a meaningful experience and the opportunity to network with legal professionals. Volunteer opportunities are frequently posted to Symplicity (https://law-fsu-csm.symplicity.com/).
A judicial clerkship, whether it is with an individual judge or an entire court, is an excellent first step in a legal career. A clerkship provides a unique opportunity to learn from a skilled jurist and to experience the behind-the-scenes workings of the judicial system. As a judicial clerk, you will have the opportunity to develop and refine your research and writing skills, learn the intricacies of trial or appellate procedure, and gain exposure to the bar that practices before that court. A clerkship can also further one’s career goals. Because such positions are so limited, they are viewed as very prestigious and valued, and many clerks have an edge in competing for subsequent jobs with both private and public sector employers.

Judicial Law Clerk Faculty Committee: The law school recently formed a faculty committee with the goal of encouraging and assisting law students obtain federal judicial clerkships. Please contact the Placement Office to obtain information on current faculty committee members who will be more than happy to assist you in the application process.

When considering clerkships, think about the following array of opportunities:

Federal courts
- United States Supreme Court
- Federal District Courts
- Appellate (Circuit) Courts
- Magistrate Judges

Specialty Courts
- Court of Federal Claims
- Bankruptcy Court
- Tax Court
- Court of International Trade
- Alien Terrorist Removal Court
- Military Courts (civilian clerks)
- Court of Veterans Appeals
- International Tribunals

State Courts
- State Supreme and Appellate Courts
- General Trial (County and City) Courts

LEGAL RESUME: AN OVERVIEW

Resume Preparation

Your resume is often your first introduction to an employer. Therefore, it must project a professional and self-assured image. Its most important function is to be a selling piece to help you obtain an interview. It is also important as a conversational guide and as a memory-refresher after the interview. It should be written to interest the employer and to supply information concerning your education, past experience, and unique abilities and skills. Identify those experiences in your background that make you particularly qualified for the position you are seeking and find ways to highlight them in a positive way. Review your resume from the point of view of the employer to determine whether you have given a complete and positive view of yourself as a potential employee.

Why are resumes and cover letters so important?

For starters, your resume and cover letter will be the only tangible things that prospective legal employers will have on which to judge you as a candidate. Most legal recruiters will spend less than 30 seconds reviewing your resume and cover letter. Therefore, you want to make sure that you are portraying yourself in a manner that is positive, organized, concise, and persuasive. Your cover letter and resume should be your absolute best work product.

What are the characteristics of a good resume?

A good resume is concise and brief. The general rule is to keep it to one page (unless you had a previous career before law school). If you absolutely must go to two pages to cover pertinent information, be sure that you can justify each entry as important. For maximum impact, the resume should be arranged so that the high points can be absorbed in literally 20 seconds. This may be all the time you get from the reader, so use it well. Do not, however, resort to cute gimmicks to attract attention. Remember that the legal profession is typically very conservative. Also remember, never use “first person” pronouns (i.e. “I”) on your resume.

Be absolutely certain that the information provided is correct. Do not estimate information; use accurate class standing, GPA, dates and titles. Proofread the resume. It must be free of grammatical, typographical, and spelling errors. Employers will cut applicants based on one typo in a resume!

Where to start?

Begin with the heading. Your name should be at the top of the resume, either in bold or all CAPS and in a larger type size. Include your current address (don’t forget apartment numbers) and a telephone number where you can be reached. Make sure the phone number you list on your resume has a professional voicemail (i.e. “You have reached First name, Last name. I am unable to take your call, but please leave me your name and number, and I will return your call as soon as possible.”). Use a good quality resume paper, like linen. Use only white or ivory/cream colored paper.

If you are interested in employers in specific geographic locations (i.e., where you permanently reside), you may wish to include a permanent address as well. This is useful because it shows ties to a particular area and allows employers to contact you when school is not in session.

Finally, include your e-mail address. Make sure you check it regularly! Make sure your email address is professional. Do not use nicknames or slang (i.e. tons2luv@aol.com).

What about stating an objective?

Forget about career objectives. It takes up valuable space on your resume. Career objectives and plans are more effective in your cover letter.
LEGAL RESUME: AN OVERVIEW

What do I list first: Education or Experience?

As a law student, education should be the first section on your resume. (Once you have graduated, you may want to list Experience or Bar Memberships first.) List your education starting with your law school and working backwards to undergraduate. Do not include high school information. Spell out the educational institutions’ full names. Do not use the more familiar FSU College of Law.

For your law school information, indicate your status as “Juris Doctor Candidate, May 20__.” With respect to other schools, make sure to list the dates that you received your degree by month and year. Do not use exact dates or dates of attendance. Also indicate the kind of degree (Bachelor of Science, etc.) and the major area of study. You may also include participation in study abroad programs.

Should I include my G.P.A. or other grade information?

The decision to put grades or class rank on your resume is a sensitive subject and should be considered carefully by each student. First, you want to make sure that you are including information that works to your advantage. If you have significant work experience or other qualifications to set you apart from others, then an employer may very well select you for an interview without any grade information. There are always employers who will assume the worst if no grade information is provided. Keep in mind that if grades are an important hiring criterion to a particular employer and you do not have top grades, you probably will not be selected for an interview.

If your grades have shown consistent improvement, you may want to highlight that by breaking them down by academic year. If you have had unusual circumstances while in law school (illness, injury, etc.) which have impacted your academic performance, indicate this in your cover letter.

Make sure when you list your grades or class rank that they are accurate. Most legal employers will eventually ask for a transcript, so your resume grades should match grades on your transcript.

If you have a specific question regarding how best to illustrate grades or class rank, or specific coursework, please stop by the Placement Office and we can assist you. Generally if you are in the top 33% of your class, then you should include your grades and class rank on your resume.

Do I include LSAT Scores?

No!

Do I include information about high school?

No! Unless you had a unique high school experience, then there is no reason to list it.
LEGAL RESUME: AN OVERVIEW

Where do I put my honors and activities from school?

Indicate honors and/or activities under the respective education sections. It is preferable to separate Honors and Activities, but you may combine the headings if you wish. If you use a combined heading however make sure you have information listed for both categories. Do not call the section Honors/Activities and just list activities.

Awards or distinctions such as Dean’s List, Journals, Moot Court and Mock Trial should be listed under Honors. Be sure to include a brief description of the honor if it is not self-explanatory or universal.

Activities should include student organization memberships or sports activities in which you have participated. Make sure to include any elected offices. Undergraduate activities are only important if they show achievement, leadership, or something that you feel is particularly important for the employer to know.

Do I use “Employment” or “Experience” as a section title?

There is no right answer here; either one is acceptable. Most students entitle the section EXPERIENCE to include clinical work during law school, internships, and/or volunteer work in this section. Significant volunteer work counts equally towards experience and need not be singled out in a separate section (although it can be if you prefer). Make sure that you list work in reverse chronological order (most recent first). The format should include the employer name, city and state, dates you held the position (month/year), title and description.

Descriptions are an important detail and you should carefully consider the information you include here. The most recent job does not necessarily warrant the longest description. Instead, use longer descriptions to accentuate those work experiences most relevant to your job search. Employers will assume that the longer the job description, the more priority you gave to the work.

Break down the individual description sections into short, active phrases that read more quickly and easily than complete sentences. Use dynamic action verbs and be consistent in your tenses.

You need not create separate sections for “legal” versus “nonlegal experience.” Many of the skills and responsibilities of nonlegal positions are transferable to the legal field. Thus, focus on these transferable skills in your job descriptions as many employers will focus on the types of responsibilities you had rather than the legal subject matter.

What about categories such as publications, languages, interests, references, or computer skills?

A PUBLICATIONS section should be used to list either published or unpublished works to provide further evidence of your research and writing abilities. Be prepared to produce copies.

If you are fluent or conversational in more than one language, you should create a separate category called: LANGUAGE(S). Use terms such as “Fluent in French,” “Can read Italian,” “Conversational Japanese.” Be sure not to overrate your skills in the event that you are asked to demonstrate them during an interview.

Adding a line or two about INTERESTS can be invaluable. Not only does it counterbalance your academic pursuits, but it also provides interviewers additional topics of conversation. However, many employers and students believe that interests are not related to professional qualifications and thus do not belong on a legal resume. Because there are differing opinions about the value of interests on a resume, do what makes you feel comfortable. If you choose to include interests, be sure to include only those interests for which you have a genuine passion. Do not exaggerate to make you sound more worldly or scholarly. Remember this rule of thumb: hobbies should be interesting but not weird. Bounce your ideas off the Placement Office before you include them on your resume.

A REFERENCES section is not necessary because employers assume that you will be able and ready to provide references upon request. Before you list someone as a reference, ask permission and provide your resume to your reference.

Omit a COMPUTER SKILLS section! It is universally assumed that all law students have and will graduate with skills in word processing and on-line research such as Westlaw and/or Lexis. The exception to this is if you have advanced computer skills that will be directly relevant to the position you are seeking (e.g., working in a technology-related legal field) or have advanced knowledge of Westlaw/Lexis (e.g., Advanced Certificate Training).

What are the standard margins and font styles/sizes?

The standard margins on a legal resume can be 0.7 to 1 inch all the way around the document. Standard font styles are Times New Roman, CG Times, Arial, Garamond, and Tahoma. The standard font size for the body of your resume (excluding your name, contact information and section titles) can be a 10pt. to a 12pt. font size.

How should a resume be saved for electronic applications?

Many times, your resume will be submitted electronically to potential employers. Your resume and any other materials should be saved as a .pdf to ensure that the receiver will get a copy of your materials in the original format. You should use your name as the file name as a courtesy to the employer (i.e. michaelbluthresume.pdf).
References

A reference page is important when sending out your resume. Do not put the statement “references available upon request” on your resume; it is taken for granted that you are able to provide references. Generally the reference page is a separate sheet from the resume. Usually three to five references should be provided, and include their name, title, address, phone number, and email address.

List prior and present employers, especially attorneys. Law school and undergraduate professors who are very knowledgeable about your work should also be listed. Don’t list personal references or “family friends” who have known you forever, and can only attest to your personality or character (unless specifically requested).

Ask permission from your references before you give out their name. (Tip: send your references a copy of your resume to have on hand when they are called.) Ask your references what they would say about your work if asked. You cannot afford any surprises when applying for a job.

Letters of Recommendation

A letter of recommendation should accomplish several purposes. First, it should describe how the author knows you and for how long. Second, it should discuss your personal and professional attributes (with emphasis on professional) and it should comment on your past performance. Finally, it should state the author’s general level of recommendation.

Many students ask former employers to write general letters of recommendation that accompany their resume packets. There are two schools of thought regarding these “to whom it may concern” letters. While some employers consider these general letters to be valid recommendations, there are some employers who take the position that they are not valid because they were not written or obtained in confidence. If you do decide to attach a general letter of recommendation, make sure it is up-to-date. Keep in mind that most employers like to call references on the phone. They can learn more by hearing a person’s voice tone.

Writing Samples

Some employers may ask you to provide a writing sample during the application process. You should be prepared with examples of your best work. It is also a good idea to re-read your writing sample before your interview in case you are asked to discuss the subject.

ALL legal employers value legal research and writing skills and use writing samples to assess your writing style and proficiency. An ideal writing sample demonstrates your ability to analyze a set of facts. It also shows your ability to take and support a position with sound legal reasoning by applying and distinguishing case law or applicable statutes and rules.
What to use? You may use a law school paper or a work product from a previous job. The work should be entirely yours. If the writing was edited or done with others, your contribution should be clearly identified. First-year students usually have to use a paper from their legal writing course. If you use a work product from a previous job, make sure to get permission from your supervising attorney in advance. You should also redact (“white-out”) client names to protect confidentiality.

The four types of legal writing:
1. Application Analysis. This includes memos, briefs, judicial opinions, and law school exams. (Most employers expect to see an application analysis, as this is what the attorney or law student is going to be asked to do in his or her job.)
2. Critical Analysis. Includes seminar papers, law review articles, and case notes.
3. Legal Drafting. Includes contracts, interrogatories, and pleadings.
4. Legal Correspondence. Includes letters to clients and other attorneys.

Length? Even though most legal writings (memoranda of law, briefs, etc.) are fairly lengthy, most employers will not want to read more than 6-10 pages. It is appropriate to submit an abridged version of a writing sample. If you choose to do so, you may include an introductory cover page or paragraph with the following (or similar) language:

> “The following is an excerpt from my Open Memo I submitted in my Legal Writing and Research class. I would be more than happy to provide a copy of the entire work upon request.”

If submitting a shortened sample, you should provide the applicable fact pattern or issue so that the employer can read your legal analysis(es) in context.

Transcripts

You will probably be asked to provide a transcript by the time your search is almost completed. Unless directed otherwise by the employer, you may send an unofficial transcript. It is also recommended that you keep several copies on hand to take on interviews. You can obtain transcripts from the Admissions Office. If you need to scan a copy of your transcript, you can do so at the Placement Office.

Things to consider:

1. For resume purposes, you should only indicate your GPA in 100-point scale to accurately reflect the grading system at our law school. The GPA you obtain from Blackboard, which is on a 4.0-scale, should NOT be used on your resume.

2. Transcripts/grades printed off of Blackboard should NOT be used when applying for legal jobs. Only use unofficial transcripts or official transcripts obtained from the law school registrar. You must submit a completed Records Request form to the law school registrar, and the form can be found at the following website:

   > http://www.law.fsu.edu/academic_programs/curriculum/records_request.pdf

3. Rounding off or approximating your GPA/class rank is prohibited. If you choose to put your GPA and class rank on your resume, it must be identical to the GPA and class you receive from the law school Registrar.

3. Rounding up your GPA it is an example of a material misrepresentation.
Long Personal Resume

It is a good idea to keep and maintain a personal resume for yourself. Every time you join an association or organization, you should add the information to your long personal resume. You can then cut and paste information from your long personal resume onto your legal resume as needed. It is a good idea to customize your legal resume for each employer. For example, if you are applying for an attorney position at an environmental law firm, then you will want to include all of your volunteer experience with the Sierra Club. However, you may not want to take up space on your resume with your Sierra Club experience if you are applying for an attorney position at a boutique tax law firm. By keeping all of your experience in chronological order on your long personal resume, it will be easy to personalize your legal resume quickly and easily.

Resume Suggestions

- Standard Margins: 0.7 to 1 inch; Standard Font Size: 10 to 12 pt. font size for body of resume.
- Align all columns.
- Describe non-legal experience using “legal” verbs (i.e. drafted, communicated, synthesized, organized, supervised, analyzed, and prioritized).
- List only 1 phone number and make sure your outgoing message is professional.
- Use only professional e-mail addresses on your resume.
- Be concise.
- List your law degree as “Juris Doctor Candidate, May 201_” or “Juris Doctor expected, December 201_.”
- The education section of the resume should begin with “Florida State University College of Law.” Then list education working backwards to your undergraduate degree.
- Use 8 ½ x 11 inch paper only.
- Use only white or cream colored paper.
- Include present work experience.
- Describe any honors or activities that are not self-explanatory.
- Proofread! Proofread! Proofread!
- Include ALL legal/law related experience.
- Keep formatting consistent.
- If you are invited onto Law Review, then list it as “Law Review Invitee.”
- Save your resume as a .pdf and use your name as the file name (i.e. michaelbluthresume.pdf)

Resume Pitfalls

- Inclusion or mention of salary or indicating reasons for leaving prior employment.
- Using “I” or “me” anywhere.
- Titling the page, “Resume.”
- Exceeding one (1) page (unless you had a previous career or industry that prefers a detailed CV).
- Exaggerating or approximating your GPA or other credentials.
- Including activities or employment that you have not participated in (i.e. If you have not been formally invited to be on law review, then do not put law review on your resume).
- Using nicknames or abbreviations.
- Lying!! (Sections 817.566 and 817.567, Florida Statutes).

Cover Letters and Other Correspondence

Cover Letter Preparation
A personal, well-crafted cover letter should accompany each resume you send to an employer. A cover letter offers you an opportunity to make a positive first impression on the firm or organization. It should establish logical reasons for sending your resume to a particular employer (your experience, geographical considerations, personal contact, etc.) and state your interest in and qualifications for the particular type of work.

Your cover letter and any other correspondence should be neatly typed on quality paper. Use paper that coordinates with your resume. Letters must be originals; never use copies. Neatness, proper punctuation, and correct spelling are a must. Try to get another person to proofread your letter. Employers will assume that the quality of your letter reflects the quality of your work.

If you are submitting your cover letter electronically, save your cover letter as a .pdf and use your name as the file name (i.e. michaelbluthcoverletter.pdf).

Always address the cover letter to a specific person—never send a letter “to whom it may concern.”
In order of choice, use 1) the person in charge of hiring, 2) the person who interviews on-campus, 3) a graduate of F.S.U. College of Law, or 4) the senior partner in the firm. Check with the Placement Office for information regarding on-campus interviewers. Employer websites, Martindale-Hubbell, NALP, Lexis, and Westlaw are also good sources of information.

Mention any pertinent information about yourself not available in your resume. Close your letter by stating your interest in and availability for a personal interview. If you plan to be in the area at a certain time, mention that fact and indicate that you will call regarding an interview. Direct your letters to each employer; do not give the impression of a standardized form letter.

In every letter you write, the approach you take and the language you use are critical. Be professional, clear and concise, but let some of your personality shine through. A good rule for judging the effectiveness of your correspondence is to read over it as though you were the person receiving it. You should tailor your letters to meet their specific needs.

Once you have sent your cover letter to an employer, you may not get an immediate response. You may have to contact the employer again after your initial try. If this is the case, wait about two weeks for a response to your first letter before following up with another letter or a telephone call to ensure the employer received your resume. Some students hesitate to call an employer under these circumstances. Persistence in follow-up is considered a positive quality. Being a pest, however, is not. If you receive a negative (we do not have any openings) response, then remove that employer from your list. If you receive a “putting off” response (we’ve been too busy to even look at resumes), ask when you should call back and then follow up.

Tips to Remember
• Avoid typos and grammatical errors at all costs. Have someone proofread your letter.
• Sometimes less is more. You should not restate everything that is in your resume.
• Do not address your letter to “Hiring Partner” or “Recruitment Coordinator.” Take the time to find out the name of the individual.
• Show that you’ve done your homework on the firm and know its areas of practice.
• Do not exaggerate. Lying will ruin your credibility.
• Remember, lawyers are a pretty conservative group. Stay away from being cute or too conversational.
• Focus on what you can provide the employer, not why this job is the perfect opportunity for you.
• The tone of your letter is crucial. You want to be confident and enthusiastic without sounding cocky.
• Don’t shy away from mentioning connections if you know someone in the firm.
• Establish a geographic tie to the area where you are seeking work.
• If you are submitting your cover letter electronically, save your cover letter as a .pdf and use your name as the file name (i.e. michaelbluthcoverletter.pdf).
COVER LETTER STRUCTURE

Cover Letter Structure

Your Address

Date of Writing

Employer Address

Dear Mr./Ms._________________:

First Paragraph:
Introduce yourself. Tell why you are writing, name the position for which you are applying, and tell how you heard of this opening.

If you are writing to someone who is a “friend of a friend,” mention this person’s name and indicate that he/she suggested you write in the very first line of the letter to get the person’s attention. (For example → Justice Big Wig suggested I contact you regarding the associate position opening in your Tampa office.)

If you met an attorney through a non-business setting, reintroduce yourself. (For example → It was a pleasure meeting you at the Bowl-a-thon picnic last August.)

If you are writing to an alumni/ae, indicate this connection as well. (For example → I am qualified for this position because of my legal education and extensive volunteer experience with migrant farm workers.)

Second Paragraph:
State your skills and establish your value.

You need to answer the fundamental question, “What can you do for the employer?” Use this paragraph to supplement, not replicate, the information on your resume. Refer to the attached resume which gives a summary of your qualifications and a description of past employment or to whatever material (such as a writing sample) you are using to illustrate your training, interests, and experience. Be sure to mention skills that you don’t have on your resume. (i.e. ability to work under deadline pressure; outgoing; ambitious). Be sure to describe your skills. (i.e. While working at Clinton, Bush, and Obama, I honed my skills in drafting discovery and presenting cases to juries). If your experience is non-legal, be sure to explain how your skill set can be easily translated into the legal profession.

Third Paragraph:
State your interest.

Tell why you are interested in working for this employer, and specify your interests in this type of work. If you have experience, sources, publications, or clinical experience, be sure to point out what particular achievements you have accomplished in this field or type of work. If you have a strong geographical tie to the area, then state it. (i.e. I have strong family connections to the Tampa area.)

Fourth Paragraph:
Assert your method of follow up.

Have an appropriate closing to pave the way for the interview by giving your telephone number or by offering some similar suggestion for an immediate and favorable reply. Let the employer know if you will be in that area or that you will call to arrange for an interview and that your resume is enclosed.

Sincerely,
Your Signature

Nick Miller, Esq.
Miller & Schmidt
25 Broadway Street
Orlando, FL 33333

Dear Mr. Miller:

I was delighted to read about your associate position opening from the Florida Bar News. I will be graduating from Florida State University College of Law in May 2014 and am qualified for this position because of my legal education, work experience with the U.S. Securities & Exchange Commission, and compliance background. Your firm is of particular interest to me because of your specific involvement in securities regulations work.

The legal intern position I held last summer with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington D.C., was an excellent learning experience and underscores my interest in that area of law. While working as an intern, I was able to learn federal securities law. I was able to develop my computer research skills and legal writing skills by assisting S.E.C. attorneys in preparing discovery for federal litigation.

Additionally, my work experience at Merrill Lynch prior to attending law school focused on securities compliance. During my tenure at Merrill Lynch, I was able to serve as the liaison between customers and administration regarding all securities issues for the Southeast region of Georgia. This position required me to communicate effectively with clients, work under deadline pressure, and prioritize multiple responsibilities.

I plan to visit my parents in Orlando the week of December 18th, and I look forward to the opportunity to interview with you during that time at your convenience. I will contact your office the week of November 14th to confirm receipt of my documents, answer any questions you may have, and see if we might be able to find a time to meet in person.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Zooey Deschanel

Frank Reynolds, Esq.
P.O. Box 111
Philadelphia, PA 19019

Dear Mr. Reynolds:

I am a first-year law student at the Florida State University College of Law. Last week, I had the pleasure of meeting one of your associates, Deandra Reynolds, at a Florida Bar/Real Property Section reception held at my law school. After talking to her about my particular interest in the area of real property and probate law, she suggested that I contact you regarding opportunities in your summer associate program.

I believe strongly that my educational background and practical work experience would allow me to make immediate contributions at Kip, Rico & Rex. As you will see from my attached resume, prior to attending law school, I was employed as a runner by the Tallahassee firm of Summer & Wheatly. While my position was primarily clerical in nature, I found the experience to be an invaluable one in terms of exposing me to a law firm setting and allowing me to develop strong interpersonal and communication skills. I also had the opportunity to learn a bit about probate law and this is an area that I am interested in exploring further. Although my first year coursework is prescribed, I look forward to next year when I will be able to take classes in related areas of law.

I greatly enjoyed the opportunity and experience gained at Summer & Wheatly last summer. It was a great experience to prepare me for law school. For this upcoming summer, I am seeking a position that is in Idaho, where I plan to relocate upon my graduation in April 2013 in order to remain close to my family.

I would very much appreciate the opportunity to meet with you to further discuss my qualifications. I will be returning to Idaho the week of March 4th and would welcome the chance to talk with you during that time. I will contact your office the week of February 25th to confirm receipt of my application, answer any questions you may have, and determine if an interview can be arranged at your convenience. If there is any additional information that I can provide to you in the meantime, please do not hesitate to contact me at (850) 555-1234.

Thank you for your time and consideration in this matter.

Sincerely,

Charlie Kelly
Michael Bluth, Recruiting Manager
Bob Loblaw, LLC
2789 Park Avenue
New York, NY 10143

Dear Mr. Bluth:

I appreciate you getting back in touch with me in regards to Bob Loblaw, LLC’s Coast-to-Coast event! Although my law school exam schedule has prevented me from visiting the South Florida offices, I’m excited to have the opportunity to learn more about the Bob Loblaw, LLC firm culture, client work, and summer associate program from the lawyers in the Miami office next Friday.

Presently, I am a rising 2L at the Florida State University College of Law. During my remaining time in law school, I plan to concentrate my studies in transactional related classes in addition to completing a nationally ranked environmental law certificate program. Outside of the classroom, I am a member of the Mock Trial team and will be participating next February in the D-List competition in Los Angeles, California.

As my enclosed resume reflects, I have planned my education and experiences thus far to enable myself to enter a transaction-oriented practice area upon graduation from law school. This summer I have enjoyed the unique opportunity to clerk in the transactional practice of a San Diego boutique firm that caters specifically to entertainment venues. During my clerkship thus far, I have been involved in various stages and capacities with the contracts of these venues.

My education and experience prior to law school was concentrated in land and water management issues. Last spring I was an intern in the Water Department of the Palm Beach County Attorney’s Office. While at County Attorney’s Office, I gained experience researching the Florida Statutes and Palm Beach County ordinances. On multiple occasions, I had to give presentations to senior staffers on various water and land use management issues.

The main reason I have been attracted to Bob Loblaw, LLC is the firm’s reputation as a market leader in many of South Florida’s transactional-related practice areas. Based on my prior education and training, I feel I would make a strong addition to Bob Loblaw LLC’s South Florida team.

Thank you for your time and consideration. I’m looking forward to meeting the lawyers in the Coconut Grove office!

Sincerely,
Lindsay Funke

The Honorable Judith Sheindlin
United States District Court
2188 Gabrielle Solis Federal Building
75 Spring Street, S.W.
Atlanta, GA 30303

Dear Judge Sheindlin:

My name is Bart Simpson and I am a third-year student at the Florida State University College of Law. Having attended Springfield College for my undergraduate degree in Earth Science, I would appreciate the opportunity to return to the familiar city of Atlanta to serve as your judicial clerk beginning in the fall of 2013. Enclosed, please find a current resume, writing sample, transcript and letters of recommendation.

Prior to entering law school, I completed my Master's degree in Forestry at the University of Illinois, where I finished first in my graduate class. Currently, I rank eighth in my law class, placing me in the top 3% overall. I am a member of both the Florida State Moot Court Team and The Florida State Law Review, for which I have served as Notes and Comments Editor, earning two Outstanding Subciter Awards, and the Editor-in-Chief’s “Piece of the Year” Award.

This past summer, I had the pleasure of working as a summer associate at the international firm of Moe, Homer & Burns, LLP, where I gained litigation experience in civil matters ranging from real property issues to toxic tort and copyright infringement. In addition, I have served as a law clerk for the Tallahassee law firm of Flanders & Krustowski. Both positions have helped improve my legal writing and research skills, my ability to analyze and interpret the law, and my interpersonal and communication skills. Further, I have served as a research assistant to Professor Waylon Smithers, former President of the American Bar Association, and well-respected appellate advocate in both the United States Supreme Court and the Supreme Court of Florida. Through that invaluable experience, I had the pleasure of drafting a brief filed with the Florida State Supreme Court, seeking an initiative constitutional amendment, as well as assisting in the preparation for oral argument.

I appreciate your time and consideration and welcome the opportunity to interview with you at your earliest convenience.

Sincerely,

Bart Simpson

Leslie Knope, Recruiting Manager
Pawnee, LLC
4466 Mahan Drive
Tallahassee, FL 32301

Dear Ms. Knope:

As you know, I am completing my last year of law school at Florida State University and will be graduating in May of 2015. I am beginning to put some “feelers” out in advance of the completion of my degree and would appreciate any advice and referrals you might be able to give me to assist me in my job search.

Enclosed you will find my resume. As you may note, I have spent a summer clerking for Davis, Rodriguez, Ash, and Flury, a local firm, which has a reputation for encouraging its attorneys to do pro bono work and get involved in the community. I also completed an internship during my second year with Wakulla Springs Legal Aid, working in their consumer law department. Ideally, the position I am looking for would be at a small to medium sized general practice law firm that would allow me some freedom to continue my work with helping to provide legal services for the indigent. I prefer to remain living within Florida but would relocate in the right circumstances.

If any situations come to mind where you think my skills and background would fit, or if you have any suggestions as to others whom it might be beneficial for me to speak, I would appreciate hearing from you. You may contact me at (913) 555-3434.

Thank you for taking the time to assist me. I look forward to hearing from you.

Dear Mr. Potter:

Albus Dumbledore suggested that I contact you regarding your extensive tax practice. I am interested in pursuing a practice in tax law and would like to be able to conduct an informational interview with you.

I am currently a third-year law student at the Florida State University College of Law. From the enclosed resume you will note that I have been concentrating my law school courses and prior summer clerkships in the tax field to prepare me for an associate position with a private firm specializing in tax law. I would appreciate being able to talk with you and obtain first-hand information about what a tax practice is really like and your advice on how to focus my last year of law school to best prepare me for a career in tax law.

If law school is any indication of the workload ahead, then I can appreciate how busy your schedule is. However, I would appreciate being able to meet with you briefly. I will contact you on Tuesday of next week to discuss scheduling an appointment.

Dear Mr. Waltz:

Thank you for agreeing to meet with me. It was a pleasure to speak with you when you were at the Florida State University College of Law last Friday.

I was very impressed by the description you gave me of your firm’s tax practice. I, too, believe that one cannot practice tax in a vacuum and thus, would welcome the opportunity to integrate myself into all phases of my client’s legal needs.

I regret that we did not have more time to talk, as I would have liked to have discussed my qualifications in more depth with you. Briefly, let me point out to you that in addition to the experience I gained as a CPA with Swashbuckle and Associates, I have taken the following courses which I believe will be most useful to me in a practice such as yours: Bankruptcy Policy Seminar, Taxation 1, and White Collar Crime.

I look forward to a further interview with your firm. I hope to hear from you soon.

Dear Ms. Jolie:

Thank you so much for taking the time to interview me yesterday at the Florida State University College of Law. I thoroughly enjoyed our discussion and only regret that we were not able to talk longer.

Having worked in the Orlando community, I was aware of your firm’s excellent reputation. My interview only confirmed my initial impression that I would like to become professionally associated with your firm. The opportunity to practice in the field of commercial litigation, while still being able to explore other areas of the law (such as our mutual interest in family law) is very appealing to me.

I hope that you will seriously consider me for a position with your fine firm. Again, it was a pleasure speaking with you. I look forward to hearing from you in the near future.

Dear Mr. Broderick:

It was indeed a pleasure to meet you, Mr. White, and the other members of the Law Offices of Cranston & Paul to discuss your need for an associate in 2014. Our time together was most enjoyable and informative.

Thank you again for the confidence you demonstrated in me by your generous offer. However, after careful deliberation, I have decided to withdraw myself from consideration for the position. My decision is based upon the fact that I have accepted a position elsewhere that is more suited to my qualifications, experiences, and aspirations.

You have an impressive team of attorneys, and it would have been a pleasure being able to work with you.

Best wishes to you and the other members of the Law Offices of Cranston & Paul.

Dear Mr. Dumbledore,

I am a second-year law student at FSU Law and will be in Tampa this summer. From the Alumni Placement Mentor Directory, I see you practice law in Tampa.

I will be in Tampa during the Thanksgiving holiday and was wondering if I could visit with you in your office for about 10 minutes to get some advice or guidance on breaking into the Tampa market.

I’ve attached my resume to give you some background on myself. I look forward to hearing from you.

Dear Ms. Everdeen,

It was a pleasure meeting you at the Alumni Reception last night. I enjoyed hearing about your criminal defense practice.

As I told you yesterday, I am very interested in criminal law because I am really enjoying the evidence class I am currently taking. I would appreciate it if you would let me know if you hear of any opportunities in the field.

I’ve attached my resume to provide you with more background information about myself. Please feel free to forward it.

With warmest regards,

Hermione Granger
A few years ago a young lawyer named Diana Abdala sent a flippant email to a criminal defense lawyer named William A. Korman. Mr. Korman then forwarded her email to several attorney friends. A week later Abdala’s email had been forwarded to thousands of attorneys in the United States and Europe. Abdala could have avoided this faux pas. Remember that emails can be forwarded and immediately shared with large groups of people.

If you send an attachment, make sure the document name that is forwarded is appropriate. Recently an employer received a resume from a student via email. The attachment document name was “bestf*$@ingresume.doc.” Obviously, this student did not get the job.

Tips for Using Email Effectively:
- Use a professional account name
- Don’t forget the attachments
- Be sure to include the correct attachments (i.e. do not attach a cover letter for X job when applying to Y job)
- Be sure all attachments are saved as .pdfs and include your own name as the file name (i.e. michaelbluthresume.pdf)
- Avoid “casual speak”
- Pay attention to employer preference when sending application materials
- Use proper spelling, grammar & punctuation
- Make it personal, but not overly informal
- Be concise and to the point
- Answer all questions, and pre-empt further questions
- Do not attach unnecessary files
- Use proper structure & layout
- Do not overuse the high priority option
- Do not write in CAPITALS or all lower-case
- Read and re-read the email before you send it
- Do not overuse "Reply to All"
- Do not use emoticons and "netspeak” acronyms in professional e-mails (i.e. LOL, ROFL)
- Do not request delivery and read receipts
- Indicate a meaningful subject line (i.e. “Application for summer law clerk position”)
- Use active instead of passive voice
- Avoid using URGENT and IMPORTANT
- Avoid long sentences
- Use cc: field sparingly
- Be aware that unless the reader knows you well on a personal level, sarcasm and humor do not always convey through email, and can be misinterpreted.
- Remember that, while email is widely accepted, a handwritten note is still a very nice touch.

FSU LAW JD Candidate 2015
Personal Websites
Employers are checking candidates’ personal websites like MySpace, Facebook, and Friendster. Be cautious when using these websites. Set your websites to “private” and be cognizant of the pictures and information you post to the Internet because employers are WATCHING!

As an employer, would you trust any of the people below to take a client out for drinks & dinner? Do you think a client might be concerned about his/her representation if they saw these pictures of their attorney? Do you think these people would lose credibility with a jury if anyone on the jury saw these photos? Would these people lose credibility with a judge or opposing counsel if the judge or opposing counsel stumbled across these photos online? As an employer, would you feel comfortable sending any of these people to an out-of-state deposition or conference?

Blogs
Many students incorrectly assume anonymity when participating in on-line blogs. While some students assume an alias, an alias may be traceable. Many employers will also check blogs in addition to web sites such as Facebook and Twitter. Negative comments regarding school, political rants, and descriptive postings of wild parties, may harm your chances of obtaining employment.

Tips for Monitoring Your Online Reputation:
- See what your online reputation looks like by Googling yourself. Also check Google Images.
- Set up regular Google Alerts for your name to continually monitor your online presence.
- Set up a Google profile so you can control the links that make up your online personality.
- Complete professional profiles for web sites such as LinkedIn to present the information you want to be seen.
- View what others are posting about you, including tagging of photos.
- Immediately un-tag yourself from any discriminating content.
- Actively post professional content associated with your name. More positive and recent posts will push down older and unwanted information in the search results of your name.
- Sign up for social network sites such as LinkedIn, Twitter, Facebook and WordPress you don’t use in order to “claim” your name.
Managing Your Online Image
Your online image is now part of the public record. In the past, a job interview was your first chance to make an impression on a potential employer; now, your first impression is based on your online image.

When reviewing your application, prospective employers will Google you and search for any social media profiles. Some employers even ask applicants to give them access to social media profiles. Prospective employers are looking for any indication that an applicant does not fit into the employer’s image and values. It is necessary to ensure that what you have online is the image you want to project.

1. Search the Internet with your full name.
   Search text, images, videos, and news; the results may surprise you.

2. Clean up your social networks.
   Make sure all information displayed on your social networking pages align with the image and values of your potential employer. What type of person do your social networking pages portray you as? Is it someone your mother or grandmother would be proud of? What do your photographs say about you? Do you use proper spelling and grammar? Are you proud of every post, image, and video you are tagged in? Cleaning up your profile may take some time, but it is worth it!

3. Join online professional networks.
   LinkedIn is highly recommended, and it is free to join! Join LinkedIn groups in professional fields you are interested in.

4. Search for websites in your field of interest.
   Contact the websites, and offer to write a guest post about the subject area. Writing guests posts creates unique content that can be found with a Google search of your name. You could also create a YouTube video to demonstrate expertise in your subject area.

5. Populate your profiles.
   Now that you have cleaned up your social media profiles, be sure to populate them with excellent information about your field of interest. Also, only add the best posts, photographs, and videos to your profile.

6. Create a Google alert for your name.
   By creating an alert, every time your name appears online, you will get an email notifying you.

7. Stay positive!
This is the most important tip to follow. The internet is not a good place for you to vent. In fact, potential employers may take your comments very seriously. Never vent about a person, a corporation, a politician, or anyone else on the internet.
INTERVIEWING TIPS

By the time you reach the interview stage of the job search, you have analyzed your abilities and skills, and you know what type of legal employment for which you qualify. You have chosen your geographical preferences and your resume presents a clear picture of your education and employment history. You have carefully researched employers and have prepared appropriate cover letters for each one. On paper you are qualified and must now face the ultimate test: the interview.

Once you obtain an interview with an employer, you are at the most critical point in your job search with respect to your ability to convey your qualifications in face-to-face conversations with your prospective employer. At this point, the emphasis has shifted from “paper” to your ability to deal with human relationships. To be successful in an interview you must use skills of judgment, intuition, and insight.

This process will be much easier for you if you understand that an interview is a mutual exchange of information between an applicant and an employer. The interviewer is seeking information about your background and personality that will aid in judging your potential contribution and worth to the firm itself. The interview provides an opportunity for the interviewer and the student to assess whether a potential working relationship will be possible and profitable. The interview not only provides an important test of one’s intellect and skill as a lawyer, but it also gives the student an opportunity to demonstrate personality, poise, tact, maturity, and sophistication.

In the few minutes you have at the beginning of the interview, you will need to size up the interviewer quickly. They may be well trained and experienced or they may be interviewing for the first time and feel completely uncomfortable with the process. Assess the interviewer’s skill early in the interview and adopt an appropriate approach. Try to determine what type of personality the interviewer has. Be alert for body language to assist you in learning the comfort level of the interviewer. If the interviewer seems unsure, volunteer information about your background and law school experiences. Indicate why you want to work for the firm or company and ask questions which will stimulate the interviewer to talk about a subject to which he/she can relate. Remember that you only have a short time to convince the interviewer that your strengths will be an asset to his/her organization.

Preparation for the Interview
Your chances for a successful interview increase with the amount of prior preparation. Knowledge of the firm or business is of primary importance. Use the information and resources provided by the office and talk to students, faculty, or friends who may have contact with the firm or business. You should try to know the following about the employer before the interview:

- learn about the employer by reviewing their profile on martindale.com, vault.com, and nalp.com
- areas of law the employer practices;
- hierarchy of organization;
- the name of the managing partner and/or general counsel and/or governmental agency head;
- philosophies of the employer (read the mission statement on their website);
- recent news articles about the employer (google.com is a great resource for this);
- locations of offices; and
- local happenings in the city where the employer is located. (Read the “local” section of the city’s newspaper).

Relocation
If you are interviewing with an employer and relocation will be required to take that position, you must be prepared to answer questions about why you want to live and work in that location. You should put together a solid list of reasons why you want to be in that location. Research the location by gathering information on the community from places like the city or county’s visitor information center, chamber of commerce, local bar associations, local news, alumni, etc.
Know Your Resume, Cover Letter, and Writing Sample

Relearn your resume and be prepared to elaborate on your experiences. You must review all documents you submitted with your application and be prepared to answer questions about them. Since you have researched the employer, you should have a good sense of what that employer is looking for in a new attorney. Also be prepared to explain the contents of your writing sample if the employer asks.

You can never be totally prepared for every question that may be asked. You should be as knowledgeable about the firm as possible, and you should have a fairly concrete idea of what you are looking for and what you want the interviewer to know about you. Present yourself in a positive and assured manner. Never refer to past failures or mistakes. If the interviewer asks about something unpleasant, explain the circumstances without making excuses or blaming others. Accentuate your strengths, abilities, and the positive aspects of your personality.

When the attorneys ask you questions, they are interested in how you handle the question rather than your ability to always give the correct response. Employers are not only trying to determine whether you would fit into their organization, but they are also trying to gauge how you would appear to clients, judges and juries. So be honest, direct, forthright and personable in answering all questions. A façade will be detected. Remember that your objective is to find not just a job, but also a position where you will be happy and satisfied to come to work each day.

Remember you are the interviewer as well. Asking questions about the firm or agency demonstrates your interest. Do not be afraid to ask the interviewer to clarify a point. Your questions are what distinguish one interviewee from another. If you stimulate the interviewer’s interest, you are more likely to be remembered. At the end of the interview, ask when you may expect to hear from the firm/employer.

Dress/Handshake/Answering Machine/Documents to Bring With You

You are applying for a professional position, so dress like a professional. Being appropriately dressed means looking like a lawyer who is going into court. For men, a conservative business suit, preferably dark (blue, black, gray, brown), a white shirt, and a conservative tie are most appropriate. Women should wear a tailored business suit, preferably dark (blue, black, gray, brown). Dark and conservative shoes for both men and women. Low-heeled pumps for women are appropriate. No open-toe or open-heel shoes! Be sure your suit fits properly. Once a member of the profession, you may dress according to the standards of your particular organization. While interviewing, remember the legal profession is very conservative and first impressions are very important.

Be sure to bring extra copies of your resume, writing samples, transcripts, and list of references to the interview. Carry the documents in a presentable folder or portfolio.

The manner in which you approach the interviewer provides clues to your personality and general approach to life. A firm handshake, erect posture and eye contact convey an energetic and confident image. Be positive but do not appear over-anxious. Listen carefully and ask relevant questions. Be attentive and enthusiastic; you must communicate interest and enthusiasm as well as competence.

If you do not have voicemail on your cell phone or own an answering machine, you should seriously consider buying one. Make sure you have a professional, respectable message on your voicemail or answering machine. Remember, your answering machine or voice mail service may be speaking to your next employer and you want to make a good impression (i.e. “You have reached First name Last name. I am unable to take your call right now, but please leave me your name and number, and I will return your call as soon as possible”).

INTERVIEWING TIPS

Body Language
Studies have shown that body language plays a large role in an employer’s first impression of you. The following is a list of “good” body language to use during an interview:

- grasp the interviewer’s hand firmly and look he/she straight in the eye when introduced;
- smile;
- do not get any closer than 18 inches (2 to 3 feet is even better) when there is not a desk or table between you and the interviewer;
- sit up straight and project an image of alertness;
- do not get carried away using hand gestures;
- motion that you are willing to leave the room if the interview is interrupted by a phone call;
- do not stare at the interviewer if they end up having to take a phone call during your interview (busy yourself with personal papers to create a sense of privacy); and
- do not tip your chair back because it suggests that you are overconfident and perhaps disdainful of the interviewer.

The Call-Back Interview
If you favorably impress employers at the initial interview, you may be invited to visit their offices. You will need to prepare for this interview in the same manner that you prepared for the initial interview. During the call-back interview you will meet with other attorneys in the firm. A typical law firm call-back will last a half or full day. If the firm has a recruiting administrator, that person will be responsible for your schedule when you visit the firm. Lunch and/or dinner may be included as well. Students have also been invited to receptions/cocktail parties and sailing trips. Be sure to find out what the social obligations are so you will know how to dress.

You should be prepared for very thorough interviews and for seeing many attorneys in one day. This process requires a great deal of stamina because it is often repetitious. You need to maintain your enthusiasm in the face of being asked the same questions over and over again. Have questions of your own prepared so you can participate in the conversation. Asking the same questions of various attorneys will give you different perspectives to compare.

Government and public interest organizations frequently conduct panel and in-office interviews by a group of attorneys. These interviews are usually shorter than the law firm interviews depending on the hiring structure of the agency. Students have also reported telephone interviews (both initial and call-back) for these organizations. Public interest and government agencies often cannot afford to pay for your travel expenses.

Handling Travel Arrangements/Expenses
Upon receiving an invitation for a second interview, you should talk with the interviewer to make arrangements for the visit. In many instances, the employer will make plane and hotel reservations for you. After making arrangements, confirm them in writing. Generally, a large firm will reimburse expenses. A small or medium firm may not. If no mention of reimbursement is made, it is appropriate to ask about the firm’s policy regarding expenses. You should be careful to avoid incurring unnecessary expenses and over billing for expenses. As extravagant as the recruiting practices of some employers may be, it does not follow that they appreciate you spending their money. Legitimate expenses are considered to be round-trip transportation, hotel room, meals, and ground transportation. Personal phone calls, TV movies, outrageous room service charges, etc. should not be charged to the employer.

If you travel to a city at the expense of one employer and plan to interview with additional employers, do not have that one employer pay for all of your travel expenses. You should notify the first employer about your plans to interview with additional organizations in the area before you undertake the trip. Obviously, if you have no interest in working for an out-of-town firm, then do not accept the interview.
You should under no circumstances double-bill. If you travel to a city and interview with two or more employers on a single trip, you should make arrangements with the employers to allocate out-of-pocket expenses among them in an equitable way. In addition, if you receive advances in the form of pre-paid airplane tickets or otherwise, you must again be certain that any advances in excess of actual expenses are returned to the employer.

It is a common practice for the large firms to invite your spouse to accompany you and pay his/her expenses. “Significant other” is not as clearly defined. You should discuss this with the employers before making plans. A spouse or significant other who accompanies you must be properly dressed and aware that his/her appearance and behavior may be an important role in your chances for employment.

Thank You Letters/Notes
Always send a thank you note or letter after every interview. Sample thank you letters are included in this handbook. Thank you letters can be hand-written and sent on personal stationary or they can be typed and mailed to the employer. Thank you letters are not usually sent via email.

The Placement Office tries to get the business cards of all interviewers on campus. The business cards will be in a binder titled “Thank You” at the front desk in the office. You can make a copy of the business cards so that you have the correct spelling and contact information of the interviewers for your thank you notes.

For a call-back interview, a thank you letter should be sent to the hiring partner immediately after your visit to express your appreciation for the firm’s hospitality and to reiterate your interest in employment. In some cases, you may deem it proper to write a separate letter to several individuals. It is not necessary to send thank you letters to everyone you met.

Handling Offers
The decision to accept or reject an offer can be very difficult. Although no one can tell you exactly what criteria to use to make a decision, students usually consider job satisfaction, type of work, opportunity for advancement, and salary as deciding factors. Make sure you know when a response is expected from you when you are offered the position. If you are considering other positions, then it is permissible to tell the employer that you have another offer and will need a certain amount of time to decide. While you should not feel pressured to make a quick decision, you should accept or decline an offer as soon as possible. Once you have decided to accept or decline an offer, you should inform the employer by telephone with a follow-up letter to confirm. When confirming an offer by mail, be sure to include the terms of the agreement, reiterate the starting date, salary, and any other information pertinent to employment. A sample acceptance letter is included in this handbook. An open letter from NALP (National Association of Legal Professionals) regarding offers is also included in this handbook. Please note that these timing guidelines are simply that, just guidelines. Firms are not required to abide by NALP guidelines.

Students should consider the acceptance of an offer to be a binding obligation. Therefore, you must immediately contact all other employers who are evaluating your candidacy and withdraw from consideration. You must also contact the Placement Office to report your job acceptance and to request "hardship releases" from any and all On-Campus Interviews or job fairs for which you have applied. A sample withdrawal letter in included in this handbook.

You absolutely should not continue to interview or "shop around" for competing opportunities that would conflict with the commitment you have made to your employer. Do not jeopardize your good reputation or the chances of other students by rescinding your acceptance or by failing to withdraw from other employers promptly. The employer world is much smaller than you might think, and memories can last a long time.
INTERVIEWING TIPS

Ethics in Accepting Offers
Generally, you should not accept an offer of employment if you do not intend to honor your commitment. Receiving a better offer is not an ethically acceptable reason to renege on your acceptance. Upon accepting a position, you should cancel all scheduled interviews and discontinue your job search.

If you receive an offer from one employer but are still interested in another employer, it is acceptable to request additional time to consider your offer. This way, you may contact the other party to determine where they are in the decision making process in considering you for employment.

Rescission of an acceptance is unprofessional and causes employers to have to invest resources in re-starting a search for candidates as a result of your rescission. Unfortunately, there have been past instances when students accepted job offers only to subsequently repudiate their acceptance. As a direct result, several employers have stopped recruiting at our law school.

By comparison to other fields, the legal community is a particularly close network of professionals. Attorneys often interact during the course of practice and at professional association meetings and conference, and they may talk about their experiences. If word got out that you reneged on a previous job offer, this could make it less likely for you to be offered an interview or position in subsequent searches.

On very rare occasions, unexpected circumstances would justify rescinding your acceptance of a job offer such as family and personal issues, illnesses, and an unexpected move. Rejecting an offer after acceptance would also be justified if an employer provided inaccurate information about the company or position. In these extraordinary cases, you will need to be timely and honest in withdrawing your acceptance. If possible, the employer would then have an opportunity to consider accommodating a candidate’s specific circumstance.

Please keep in mind that the rules that govern employment contracts vary from state to state. While most employment is at will, if you have concerns, consult an appropriate professional. Please do not hesitate to contact Placement Office staff if you find yourself having to consider a job offer (or multiple offers), and we would be more than happy to discuss and assist you in your decision.

Thoughts to Remember
- Be yourself.
- Sell yourself by mentioning your strong points and abilities.
- Be professional in all ways.
- Dress appropriately.
- Be punctual.
- Bring extra copies of your resume, a writing sample, transcript and references.
- Prepare thoroughly for the interview by researching all information you can find about the employer.
- Know why you want to work for the employer.
- Relax during the interview.
- Greet the interviewer naturally and cordially.
- Return a firm handshake.
A Word about Handling Discriminatory Interviewing Questions

Certain questions are discriminatory. You should be prepared to answer in a tactful and positive manner. By doing so you will convey a sense of responsibility and maturity. Questions asked in an interview should be related to characteristics required for successful job performance. Questions that should not be asked include those relating to race, age, religion, marital status, national origin, holidays observed, length of time in the United States, citizenship of relatives, current or anticipated pregnancy status or plans, spouse’s occupation, spouse’s feelings on applicant travel for the employer, and views on feminism or civil rights. However, if certain questions are deemed job related and if they are asked of all applicants, they are justifiable. For example, if a small firm needs a new lawyer who can increase the firm’s local client base and it has been determined that lawyers with established family and friends in the area are a source of new clients, that firm can use “ties to the area” as a criterion for employment.

Although most interviewers are informed regarding the issue of discriminatory questions, you will occasionally encounter an unfair or blatantly discriminatory question. Your first reaction may be to answer in a sarcastic or angry manner. Be cautious! Answer clearly and tactfully. Formulate direct, honest answers. Try directing the focus to the real issues. If you are extremely offended, suggest that the question does not relate to professional qualifications. Keep objections professional and not personal. If you are particularly upset, be sure to let the Dean know. In order to help you, the Placement Office must know a problem exists. Questions should be answered assertively rather than aggressively. Avoid being angry or frightened by unexpected questions. Review lists of questions, expect the unexpected and take a moment to formulate your answer before speaking. Try to turn embarrassing questions to your advantage.

Potentially Discriminating Questions and Possible Answers

   ____ method and extent of reimbursement clarified (if applicable)
INTERVIEWING TIPS

QUESTIONS YOU MAY BE ASKED BY THE EMPLOYER

After some introductory questions, the interviewer will likely get right to the point. Some typical questions are below. Familiarize yourself with them and put some thought into how you would (should) answer them.

1. What are your long-range and short-range goals and objectives, when and why did you establish these goals, and how are you preparing yourself to achieve them?
2. What specific goals, other than those related to your occupation, have you established for yourself?
3. What do you see yourself doing five years from now?
4. What do you really want to do in life?
5. What are the most important rewards you expect in your career?
6. What do you expect to be earning in five years?
7. Which is more important to you, the money or the type of job?
8. Why did you choose the career for which you are preparing?
9. What do you consider to be your greatest strengths and weaknesses?
10. How would you describe yourself?
11. What motivates you to put forth your greatest effort?
12. Why should I hire you?
13. What qualifications do you have that make you think that you will be successful?
14. How do you determine or evaluate success?
15. In what ways do you think you can make a contribution to our firm?
16. If you were hiring a graduate for this position, what qualities would you look for?
17. Why did you select your college or university?
18. If you could do so, how would you plan your academic study differently? Why?
19. Do you have plans for continued study? An advanced degree?
20. Do you think that your grades are a good indication of your academic achievement?
21. In what kind of work environment are you most comfortable?
22. How do you work under pressure?
23. How would you describe the ideal job for you following graduation?
24. Why did you decide to seek a position with this firm?

25. What two or three things are most important to you in your job?

26. Are you seeking employment in a firm of a certain size? Why?

27. What criteria are you using to evaluate the firm for which you hope to work for?

28. Do you have a geographical preference? Why?

29. Will you relocate? Does relocation bother you?

30. Are you willing to travel?
INTERVIEWING TIPS

SUGGESTED QUESTIONS TO ASK THE EMPLOYER

As a general guide for law students who are interested in a firm, the following questions may be of assistance during an interview and in the evaluation of a firm.

1. What is the firm's general character - - its stability and reputation? Have there been any significant split-ups in its history?

2. What are its specialties and major areas of practice?

3. Are its clients solid and varied, with important interesting problems?

4. Does the firm have an active international practice with substantial foreign clients and offices outside the United States?

5. Is the firm’s success tied to many clients or a few? How is the firm affected by the business cycle, i.e., periods of recession?

6. Is the caliber of the firm's lawyers uniformly high--with solid and able people at all age levels and in all important legal areas?

7. Are the firm's lawyers persons you will enjoy working with? Are they of sufficiently varied types and backgrounds to make the office interesting?

8. Are the firm's lawyers persons in whose legal ability, judgment and standards you will have confidence and pride? Are they individuals you will respect and admire?

9. Are the firm's organization and administration systems sound, and apparently running smoothly? Are there signs of cliques or dissidence?

10. What is the firm's future? Is it getting and keeping new people of high caliber? In recent years has it acquired important new clients?

11. Has the number of the firm's partners and associates grown significantly in the past 15 years?

12. What do new associates do? How is their work determined and assigned?

13. How do the associates’ work and responsibilities change over the years?

14. Must an associate become a specialist? If so, when? Who decides-- and how?

15. What about compensation--initial, bonus, raises? What is the firm’s general philosophy on this? And are there significant “fringe benefits?”

16. What emphasis is placed on getting new business--and how does this affect compensation?

17. How is performance judged--and by whom? What are the criteria for advancement? When does an associate become a partner?
18. Are partnership opportunities significantly affected by the business cycle? I.e., has the firm admitted fewer associates to partnership during periods of business contraction in the national economy?

19. On what basis is admission to partnership determined? Is it a "competitive standard?" (e.g., limited by a predetermined restriction on the number of partners to be admitted in a given field). Or is it determined by a “meet the firm's standard,” where all associates who meet the firm's standard of performance will become partners?

20. What does partnership entail--compensation, responsibilities, contribution?

21. If an associate does not become a partner, what opportunities does the associate have available? Does the firm help in this regard? Does the firm have many prominent and successful alumni?

22. What is the relationship between younger and older lawyers in the firm--the channels of communication (formal & informal), the degree of contact and formality?

23. What are the firm's prevailing attitudes--and practices--on such matters as pro bono work, community service and government service?

24. Does the firm have a friendly atmosphere--is it a place where people can laugh and enjoy themselves in spite of their hard work or is it stiff and formal? Is there a spirit of cooperation among the lawyers--a desire to help each other to get the job done well, or is there a harsh competitive spirit?

25. Is the locality a good place to work and live--with cultural and recreational activities, citizen interest, and convenient attractive residential areas with good schools?

You should NOT ask about money in an interview.
You should wait until the negotiating stage to discuss money.
TOUGH QUESTIONS TO ANSWER

Why should we hire you?
Here’s the chance to really sell yourself. You need to briefly and succinctly lay out your strengths, qualifications and what you can bring to the table. Be careful not to answer this question too generically, however. Nearly everyone says they are hardworking and motivated. Set yourself apart by telling the interviewer about qualities that are unique to you.

Why do you want to work here?
This is one tool interviewers use to see if you have done your homework. You should never attend an interview unless you know about the company, its direction and the industry in which it plays. If you have done your research, this question gives you an opportunity to show initiative and demonstrate how your experience and qualifications match the company’s needs.

What are your greatest weaknesses?
The secret to answering this question is being honest about a weakness, but demonstrating how you have turned it into a strength. For example, if you had a problem with organization in the past, demonstrate the steps you took to more effectively keep yourself on track. This will show that you have the ability to recognize aspects of yourself that need improvement, and the initiative to make yourself better.

Why did you leave your last job?
Even if your last job ended badly, be careful about being negative in answering this question. Be as diplomatic as possible. If you do point out negative aspects of your last job, find some positives to mention as well. Complaining endlessly about your last company will not say much for your attitude.

Describe a problem situation and how you solved it.
Sometimes it is hard to come up with a response to this request, particularly if you are coming straight from academia and do not have professional experience. Interviewers want to see that you can think critically and develop solutions, regardless of what kind of issue you faced. Even if your problem was not having enough time to study, describe the steps you took to prioritize your schedule. This will demonstrate that you are responsible and can think through situations on your own.

What accomplishment are you most proud of?
The secret to this question is being specific and selecting an accomplishment that relates to the position. Even if your greatest accomplishment is being on a championship high school basketball team, opt for a more professionally relevant accomplishment. Think of the qualities the company is looking for and develop an example that demonstrates how you can meet the company’s needs.

Tell me about yourself.
While this query seems like a piece of cake, it is difficult to answer because it is so broad. The important thing to know is that the interviewer typically does not want to know about your hometown or what you do on the weekends. He or she is trying to figure you out professionally. Pick a couple of points about yourself, your professional experience and your career goals and stick to those points. Wrap up your answer by bringing up your desire to be a part of the company. If you have a solid response prepared for this question, it can lead your conversation in a direction that allows you to elaborate on your qualifications.
What are your salary expectations?
This is one of the hardest questions, particularly for those with little experience. The first thing to do before going to your interview is to research the salary range in your field to get an idea of what you should be making. Steer clear of discussing salary specifics before receiving a job offer. Let the interviewer know that you will be open to discussing fair compensation when the time comes. If pressed for a more specific answer, always give a range, rather than a specific number.

You can use the salary data on the Placement Office web page, available here: http://www.law.fsu.edu/placement/employment_data.html

Using all these resources, you can come up with a range to use as a base during negotiations with a potential employer. If the salary the employer is offering is not quite what you are looking for, you can try negotiating for a six-month review and a salary bump at that point, or negotiate additional benefits. Feel free to contact the Placement Office for more information.
DECLINING AN INTERVIEW

If you have already accepted employment elsewhere or have made alternate plans, you may no longer be interested in accepting an offer for an interview. In this case, you should call the firm directly to speak with the firm’s point of contact (a human resources employee or a supervising attorney) for the position and explain that while you appreciate the opportunity to interview, you have accepted another position and thus must withdraw your name from consideration for the position.

If you sincerely like the employer and would want to try to work there in the future, you should also tell them that.

You should follow up with a handwritten letter or an email explaining that you really like the employer, are interested in them, and would like to stay in touch. If an alum works there, you could reach out to that person by asking to go to lunch or grab coffee to stay in touch and continue to show interest.
NETWORKING

Brainstorming for Contacts

Friends, family friends, relatives, neighbors, professors, alumni, local alumni associations, class reunions, professors, cocktail parties and fundraisers, conferences, conventions, former employees, former co-workers, public relations persons, local politicians, journalists, business people, non-profit directors, your doctor, your hair dresser, prominent community members, members of professional organizations, club meetings, internet list-servs, volunteer projects, continuing education classes, members of other organizations to which you belong or have contact, your fraternity or sorority members, children’s teachers, store owners, former employers, etc.

Expanding Your Network

Attend professional, social, educational and community events such as: lectures, seminars, conferences and events hosted by the law school or your undergraduate/graduate schools; Bar Association committee and section meetings, social events, and continuing legal education; events held by other law associations like the local family law bar, criminal defense bar, Inns of Court, etc.; business conferences; new charitable, community, and religious gatherings; etc.

Know What You Want and What is Reasonable to Ask For

Be able to articulate your career goals, to whatever extent you’ve determined them so far, and what you are asking the person for.

Be Genuinely Interested in Others

Showing genuine curiosity will help you draw out what you need to know and at the same time will make people like you. People are pleased and flattered when you refer to something they’ve told you at an earlier time. It can be about children, pets, trips, music—it doesn’t matter what. Work on remembering details of conversations with contacts and make lots of notes after you meet people to review before future meetings.

Present Yourself Professionally & Positively

Dress to project a professional image. However informal the person’s manner or the occasion seems, remember that you still need to make a positive impression as someone that person would want to recommend to others.

Express appreciation for large and small favors, not only through thank you notes but also on the spot. Always write, call, or e-mail thanks to people who give you information, advice and referrals. If you actually get a job through a contact you might send flowers, give wine, or a small gift.

Get Comfortable Talking about Your Skills & Accomplishments

Develop a “30-second sell” that shows your competence and interest in your target field. What do you want people to remember about you? Think about your training and achievements. Use short sentences and conversational language.

Take an Organized Approach

Map out a plan; calendar things to do. Set goals (i.e. # number of calls a week, # number of informational interviews a month). Keep detailed records of your meetings with people.
NETWORKING

Follow Up

Don’t end your contact with an individual at the first conversation. Thank them by letter or e-mail, keep them posted on your progress. People often feel they have to get to know you before they are ready to refer you for a job.

Be Patient

Networking doesn’t have a structured timeline like a job application with a deadline. If you keep in touch with a contact over time, your “investment” may well pay off, and sometimes in surprising ways.

Think in Terms of Giving as Well as Getting

Giving back can be as simple as sending a copy of an article you think a contact would be interested in, or as major as referring a new client. Sometimes you will be “giving back” to the person who helped you; sometimes you’ll be giving encouragement, feedback, information, advice, and practical leads to your peers or those coming behind you. You may even become a Placement Mentor upon graduation.

Contact Record

Set up a thorough and consistent contact record. You need to have a record of when you called, wrote, e-mailed, and met with people as well as a system to prompt you when you need to contact them next. Try to record as much information as possible (i.e. full name, nickname, employer, contact information, personality, topics discussed, referrals given).

Working a Room

Attend events!!! Be creative. Opportunities to meet people are endless.

When you arrive, scan the room. If you know someone, go say hello. Your friend/acquaintance may be able to introduce you to others. Write your name legibly and large on your nametag. Be upbeat and friendly. Students should always get a business card from potential employers so that follow up contact can be made.

If there is a host/hostess, find him/her and introduce yourself. Shake hands firmly and make eye contact.

Only spend about 5-10 minutes per person. When you are ready to move, extend your hand for a handshake. Ask for a business card toward the end of the conversation; tell the person you would like to get in touch to speak further. Possible exit lines:

- I'm sure there are other people you need to speak with. I don't want to monopolize your time. I've enjoyed speaking with you.
- Excuse me, it was nice meeting you.
- Excuse me; there is someone I need to talk to. (Be sure you move to another part of the room).

When you get home, be sure to record the information you gathered in your contact record. Write personalized notes to people you met thanking them for anything you learned or advice they provided. If you mentioned an article or something else they seemed interested in, send them a copy or more information about the item. If someone suggested you attend the event, send that person a note or e-mail thanking them.
Things to Say When Networking

• I’m interested in working with emerging companies in Orlando. I’d love any tips you could give me.
• I want to work in a corporate firm anywhere in the Tampa area. What do you think is the best approach for me to take?
• I’m trying to find out more about what tax lawyers do in state agencies.
• You mentioned in your speech that you practiced in a firm in Jacksonville for 5 years before you moved here. I’d be grateful for your perspective on the legal market there.
• I’m hoping to get advice on what I should do to get into the State Attorney’s Office.
• Do you have any suggestions about how I could make myself more attractive to environmental law firms?
• I’d like to stay in Tallahassee, but the most important thing to me is to do public defender work. What do you suggest?

Things to Say When You have Rapport

• Can you suggest any attorneys doing civil rights work in Miami that it would helpful to me to talk to?
• What plaintiff’s firms in town do you see as doing high caliber work?
• Do you know anyone at [potential employer] I could contact? May I use your name?
• Can you refer me to anyone doing employment law in Atlanta I could talk to?
Professionalism is acting or conducting oneself with the qualities the profession dictates. Professionalism in the law involves acting with the highest moral and ethical codes. Similarly, etiquette is defined as the practice and forms prescribed by social convention or authority. Etiquette involves showing respect and following the Golden Rule – treating others as you wish to be treated.

You should conduct yourself with professionalism from the beginning of law school and throughout your law career. You are building a reputation for yourself starting with the relationships you develop with your professors and classmates within the law school. It carries to the next level, when you are applying for internship/externship opportunities with law firms, government agencies, judges, or public interest firms. Each action you take impacts the development of your professional reputation and ultimately, what career options will be available to you upon graduation. You want to be sure that you are conducting yourself with integrity while utilizing high ethical standards to guide your actions.

Professionalism follows the basic premises of etiquette from being respectful of others’ ideas to exhibiting good time management skills. It continues with the ethics in accepting/repudiating job offers as well as ensuring that your online profile demonstrates your professional attitude.

There will be networking events you attend where dining out is involved. You also may have interviews with potential employers during a meal. When eating meals with potentials employers, it is extremely important that you follow the rules of dining etiquette.

Napkin
Place the napkin in your lap after you sit down. If you leave the table during the meal, be sure to leave your napkin, folded or unfolded, on your chair and push your chair in. When you have finished your meal, fold your napkin and put it to the left of your plate.

If you have to cough, cough into your napkin. Do not use your napkin like a tissue.

Bread
Butter your bread one bite at a time. Cut a piece of butter off the slab and put it on your bread plate. Break your bread with your hands into bite-sized pieces to butter or eat. Do not use a knife to cut your bread.

Place Settings
When you look down at your place setting, your bread plate will always be on the left. Your meal plate will be in the center with your beverage glass to your right. Think BMW – left to right – bread, meal, water.

As for utensils, work your way from the outside in. If you skip the first course, then skip the first fork. Once you use a utensil, you should never let it touch the table. The used silverware should always be resting on a plate.

Pits & Bones
All foreign surprises (i.e. olive pits and fish bone) should be removed from your mouth with your thumb and index finger. Place the object on the side of your dish. Be discreet.

If you get something stuck in your teeth and you cannot remove it discreetly with your tongue, then you should excuse yourself from the table to remove it.

Sugar Packets, Tea Bags, & Beverages
Place empty sugar packets neatly under the rim of your coffee/tea saucer. Ask for a receptacle for a used tea bag if you can’t keep it in the pot. Keep your pinky finger in check. Don’t lift your pinkie when drinking anything.

You should hold your wineglass by the stem near the bottom. Never order alcohol when interviewing for a job. During a normal business meal, you may order a cocktail if your host does. Don’t pick up a glass if you are being toasted.
Toothpicks, Lipstick, Doggie Bags, & Soup

Toothpicks should be used in the bathroom and not in public. Never powder your nose or apply lipstick at the table. Discreetly dabbing a bit of clear gloss on your lips is acceptable. Do not ask for a doggie bag unless you are with friends and family.

Do not slurp soup from a spoon. Spoon the soup away from you when you take it out of the bowl and sip it from the side of the spoon. If your soup is too hot to eat, let it sit until it cools; do not blow on it.

Ordering & Eating

If, after looking over the menu, there are items you are uncertain about, ask your server any questions you may have. It is better to find out before you order that a dish is prepared with something you are allergic to or do not like.

An employer will generally suggest that your order be taken first; his or her order will be taken last. Sometimes, however, the server will decide how the ordering will proceed. Often, women’s orders are taken before men’s. As a guest, you should not order one of the most expensive items on the menu or more than two courses unless your host indicates that it is all right. It is best to order foods that can be eaten with a knife and fork. Finger foods can be messy and are best left for informal dining. Do not eat anything until everyone at the table has been served. If you are with a large party (10 or more), then you can begin to eat when more than half of the guests have received their meal. Cut only one piece of food at a time. Slice from the end of a piece of fish or meat, not from the middle. Sit up straight at the table. When you are not eating, keep your hands on your lap or resting on the table (with wrists on the edge of the table). Elbows on the table are acceptable only between courses, not while you are eating. Never chew with your mouth open or make loud noises when you eat.

If you need something that you cannot reach easily, politely ask the person closest to the item you need to pass it to you. If you drop your silverware on the floor, pick it up if it is within reach and then ask the server for another utensil. If food spills off your plate, you may pick it up with a piece of your silverware and place it on the edge of your plate. Do not push your plate away from you when you have finished eating. Leave your plate where it is in the place setting. The common way to show that you have finished your meal is to lay your fork and knife diagonally across your plate. Place your knife and fork side by side, with the sharp side of the knife blade facing inward and the fork, tines down, to the left of the knife. Do not leave a used spoon in a cup. Place the used spoon on the saucer. Any unused silverware is simply left on the table.

Paying the Bill

If you are attending a networking event, such as a bar association meeting, there is usually a fee prior to entry of the event. If you are invited to lunch or dinner by an attorney for either a networking or interview purpose, the person who did the inviting will usually offer to take care of the bill. It is polite to offer to split or pay for the meal, but do not feel the need to offer more than once or twice. Be prepared to pay for your meal as well as your dining partner just in case. It is also appropriate to offer to pay for the gratuity, but do not keep asking or insisting if the other person has declined your offer.
ONCE YOU GET THE JOB…

5 Tips for Success

1. Understand the Dress Code

Respect that your office is a place for business by following your office’s dress code. By ignoring the dress code or taking the phrase “Casual Friday” very literally by wearing flip flops and shorts, your appearance is indicating that you do not take your job seriously.

2. Always Happily Accept Additional Responsibility

Don’t be that person who refuses to take on tasks that are not “in the job description.” This doesn’t mean you have to be a pushover or a sycophant. By being enthusiastic about learning new things, accepting new work, and supporting a collaborative effort when opportunities arise, you’re adding value to your resume and your employer. Adding value means additional success over the long term.

3. Don’t Be Greedy with Office Perks/Benefits

Even if your office offers unique perks or benefits, you shouldn’t necessarily take advantage of all of them, even if you have a coworker who does. Don’t be greedy.

4. Manners Matter

Always say please and thank you. Offer a friendly handshake and stand when being introduced to someone new. Refrain from swearing and raising your voice at others you disagree with. Don’t gossip about your coworkers.

Respect the common space in your office. Clean up your own messes.

5. Be Punctual

Being on time is easy enough, but failing to be punctual can make a bad impression. It is okay to be a few minutes late every now and then, but someone will surely notice if you are arriving late every single day.

If necessary, make some changes to your schedule by going to sleep earlier, laying out what you need the night before, and bringing breakfast with you to work. Do whatever it takes to arrive on time.
