The 2020-2021 academic year likely will be recorded as the strangest in the history of the College of Law. Masks, hand sanitizer and social distancing are everywhere. We haven't traveled at all for recruiting students, student job interviews, or alumni visits or receptions. Many of our faculty and students have engaged in our core educational mission from outside the law school walls and the city of Tallahassee. Zoom fatigue, a concept unknown to us one year earlier, overtook us with a vengeance as the reality of our canceled spring break set in. And our work and study life is broken regularly with dashes to the Civic Center for COVID tests and vaccinations.

Despite this strangeness, there is much good to report. Our professors have become experts in the use of Zoom screens and breakout rooms, virtual office hours, and enhanced assessment tools to enable students to participate actively and meaningfully in their legal education. Widespread alumni support of our student emergency fund has enabled us to support our struggling students with the financial means to adjust to lost employment, unexpected child care needs, and the enhanced technology requirements associated with active remote learning. As always, we are most grateful for your support, especially during a time when many of you have struggled, too.

Our students have adjusted well to their remote environments, and many are excelling in this new space. Our Moot Court team won five national championships this year, and the Trial Team has also won a national championship and is nationally ranked for the first time. Our Black Law Students Association (BLSA) won their 2021 regional mock trial competition in January. With many courses occurring remotely this year, we have attracted faculty and guest lecturers from across the country and the world, which has truly enriched the educational experience for everyone.

Our institutional accomplishments and recognitions also continue to grow, despite a challenging environment. Our class of 2020 employment numbers are as strong as the class of 2019, despite a much softer job market last spring and summer. And our bar passage rate of 84.4% for the delayed July Florida Bar Exam is higher than it has been in many years. According to statistics released by the ABA earlier this year, FSU is the 18th best law school in terms of the percentage of graduates who passed a bar examination in the primary jurisdiction on the first attempt. preLaw magazine ranked us the top law school in the nation for government careers, the seventh best for criminal law careers, among the top seven law schools for both public policy and human rights law, and the eighth best value law school. According to the World University Rankings (2020), which heavily weights faculty scholarship, FSU Law is the 17th best U.S. law school, and ranks among the top 50 best universities for law in the world.

Alumni engagement continues to be strong, with the introduction of practice area receptions and the planning and formation of identity-based alumni groups (see page 6 for information about the formation of the Black Alumni Network). BLSA and our Student Bar Association have each planned very rich remote programming for the entire community, and several of our alums have joined the lectures and panel discussions. At the end of the spring semester, we celebrated the end of the year and graduation!

Graduation was the first sign of a planned return to normalcy as the vaccine rollout has reached our entire university population. We plan to be fully back in person for classes this fall. We look forward to a return of lunch-hour student events and the energy that comes with having students on the law campus all day. Our 1Ls have never seen the green filled with students and faculty enjoying social events and professional networking, and we look forward to seeing them experience more of the larger community connectedness that makes FSU Law so excellent.

Although we are most eager for this return to normalcy, our forced adjustments have provided unexpected advantages that we hope to retain. It's been far too long since I have seen you, and I look forward to that as soon as possible. But I do hope our new formats of engagement will provide an opportunity to enhance the richness of our core educational mission and our connectedness with the entire FSU Law community.

See you soon!

A Tradition of Excellence: Black Alumni of FSU Law

By Christi N. Morgan

The College of Law is proud to count many successful Black lawyers and judges among its nearly 10,000 alumni. Graduates include judges, civil rights movement leaders, presidents of the National Bar Association, partners at top firms, high-ranking government attorneys, powerful lobbyists and innovative community leaders. These alumni are contributing to a tradition of excellence that shows future generations what is possible. This article features just some of FSU Law’s successful Black alumni and provides information on a new organization that aims to support all Black graduates, students and professors.

Benjamin L. Crump

FSU Law’s most nationally recognized alumnus may be Benjamin “Ben” Crump (’95). An attorney for the families of George Floyd, Breonna Taylor, Ahmaud Arbery and many others, Crump is at the forefront of civil rights and racial justice movements and has been in the spotlight more than ever recently.

“This last year of 2020 has been an unprecedented year, not only because of the COVID-19 pandemic, but also because of horrific injustices that have taken place,” said Crump. “During the pandemic, it seems like everything shut down in America except racism and police brutality.”

With clients all over the United States and frequent appearances on national news programs, Crump’s schedule is extremely full. To best represent his national clientele, after seeking approval from his wife and daughter on his travel schedule, Crump typically flies to multiple cities each week.

“Normally I don’t get to stay in one city beyond 24-36 hours before I have to go to the next city,” said Crump.

Additionally, a Netflix documentary crew has been following Crump around the country for a project that is slated to air in 2022.

Crump’s most recent legal victories include a record-setting $621 million settlement on behalf of children who experienced lead poisoning in Flint, Michigan. Crump also won a $411 million verdict in a Zoom trial on behalf of a Gadsden County, Florida man. Crump believes the second case is evidence that human emotions can transcend Zoom screens.

In addition to his recent law-related achievements, Crump also served as an executive producer and writer for a movie, “Woman in Motion,” which tells the true story of Nichelle Nichols and her efforts to recruit women and minorities to work for NASA.

Although many of his fellow alumni do not practice in the area of civil rights, Crump says everyone can play a part in his goal to end racial injustices. “As Dr. King said, ‘We all have a role to play in the struggle for equality and justice to make a better world for our children.’ I absolutely believe that everybody’s role is not to be on the front lines, but you can do something to try to make a difference in the world to help America live up to our high ideals of equal justice under the law for all American citizens.”
JoLinda L. Herring

In January 2021, JoLinda Herring (’96) was elected Bryant Miller Olive’s (BMO) managing shareholder, becoming the first Black female to take the helm of the firm.

“This is an awesome honor,” said Herring. “I am very proud of the work that the firm has done in the area of diversity and the work we are continuing to do. Also, it allows other young women to know that they can reach similar heights. As Vice President Kamala Harris says, ‘I am the first, but I do not expect to be the last.’”

As BMO’s managing shareholder, Herring will lead the firm and help chart its strategic direction. She has been preparing for this job for a long time. Herring began clerking at the firm as a law student and joined BMO as an attorney in 1996, after graduating and passing the bar exam. During her time as co-chair of BMO’s Public Finance Group—the largest practice group at the firm—Herring had many opportunities to lead and work with firm attorneys located across Florida and in Washington, D.C. and Atlanta.

“I did not have a goal to become managing shareholder,” said Herring. “However, I have been a leader all of my life and my goal is to excel at all that I do. Because of my prior experience working in a family business, I was always interested in the business aspect of the firm.”

In addition to the day-to-day responsibilities of managing the national firm, Herring aims to grow BMO’s clientele. “My goal is to increase awareness of the services and value that BMO can offer to existing clients and prospective clients in new markets who may not otherwise know who we are and what we can do for them.”

Carlos E. Moore

This summer, Carlos Moore (’02) will take the helm of the National Bar Association (NBA), the largest national network of predominantly Black attorneys.

“It is the fulfillment of a dream first birthed in 2000 as a first-year law student,” Moore said about becoming NBA president. “It’s historic in that I’m the first Mississippian and first Cochran Firm lawyer to be elected to the presidency. I’m excited about serving my people and standing for justice as the voice for the nation’s 66,000 Black lawyers, judges and law students.”

Moore is the third FSU Law alumnus to be elected president of the NBA in the past decade. Daryl Parks (’95) served as president in 2011-2012 and Ben Crump was president in 2015-2016. In addition, Moore’s NBA general counsel is slated to be alumnus Sean Pittman (’94). Moore’s presidential goals include fighting against voter suppression and police brutality, while fighting for criminal justice reform, economic justice, empowerment, civil rights, voting rights and social justice.

In addition to currently serving as president-elect of the NBA, Moore is managing partner of The Cochran Firm – Mississippi Delta, located in Grenada, Mississippi, and serves as the first Black municipal judge pro tem in both Grenada and Clarksdale, Mississippi. He primarily represents individuals in civil rights, personal injury and criminal defense cases. “The best part of my job is advocating for the little guy and giving a voice to the voiceless while leveling the playing field. I think of myself as the great equalizer.”

Moore has earned numerous awards for his work, including being named one of the top 100 African American most influential leaders in the nation in the November 2020 issue of African Leadership Magazine.

Also in November 2020, Moore published a co-authored book, “The Five Brothers: Our Journeys to Successful Careers in Law & Medicine.” The book chronicles the obstacles the African-American authors—three attorneys, a judge and a physician—overcame to achieve their educational and professional goals.

“People needed to know the story behind the glory,” Moore said about why the book is important. “We are not overnight successes and overcame obstacles, beating the odds to become first-generation professionals. If we did it, so can others.”

Federal Judge Mary Stenson Scriven

The Honorable Mary Stenson Scriven ('87) has served on the U.S. District Court for the Middle District of Florida since 2008. Prior to that, she was a United States magistrate judge for the Middle District of Florida for more than 10 years. Scriven was the first Black woman to serve on the federal bench in Florida.

“Serving in the federal judiciary allows me to participate in the preservation of the highest tenets and ideals of our system of justice,” said Scriven. “Those who know me know that I love every aspect of the law—from the most mundane discovery dispute to the most hotly contested, sophisticated business challenge involving complicated areas of law, to matters of life and liberty that arise in the criminal context. Working with highly competent litigators to ensure that justice is served and that every party has a fair ‘day in court’ is what motivates me.”

COVID-19 has greatly impacted Scriven’s work. She currently chairs the court’s COVID-19 Committee for the Middle District of Florida and has become very proficient in Zoom and Teams. “We have held countless remote civil evidentiary and non-evidentiary hearings and criminal sentencings via Zoom as permitted under the CARES Act. Our court staff has worked tirelessly and sacrificially to ensure that litigants’ rights were preserved under these unprecedented circumstances.”

In January 2021, Scriven even hosted the first full Zoom jury trial in a Florida federal court. “The jurors never stepped foot in the courthouse, and we managed to select the jury, hold the trial and achieve a verdict in four days.”

Scriven also currently serves in numerous judicial leadership roles—she is the administrative judge for the Tampa Division and a member of the Executive Committee of the court, and chairs the Eleventh Circuit Pattern Jury Instructions Committee. In 2018, Scriven was elected by her peers in the Eleventh Circuit to serve on the Federal Judges Association Board of Directors and was recently appointed to the Executive Board. In 2012, Scriven was honored for her leadership and excellence by the National Bar Association with the prestigious Gertrude E. Rush Award.

A Georgia native who attend Duke University for undergrad, Scriven chose FSU Law over the University of Florida for smaller class sizes, faculty accessibility and a reputation for strong moot court and legal writing programs.

“My FSU education has served me well throughout my career,” said Scriven. “I have found FSU’s alumni network to be second to none in our legal community. From my first job to the one I hold now, I have found comrades from FSU ready to embrace me and assist me in my work and professional endeavors.”

Since the law school graduated its first class in 1969, more than 25 Black alumni have ascended to the bench. The Honorable Zebedee Wright ('71) was FSU Law’s first Black male graduate and became a judge in 1982. The law school’s first Black female graduate, the Honorable Catherine Brunson ('75), also served on the bench from 1994-2018. The Honorable Emerson Thompson ('73) retired from the Fifth District Court of Appeal in 2008; the Honorable Nikki Clark ('77) retired from the First District Court of Appeal in 2015; the Honorable Jessica Costello ('09) was appointed to the Thirteenth Judicial Circuit in 2019; and the Honorable Anthony Miller was appointed to the Second Judicial Circuit in 2020.
Sean A. Pittman

As managing partner and senior attorney at Pittman Law Group, Sean Pittman ('94) is not only a trusted lawyer, but also very involved in Florida’s political process. He represents clients before the Florida Cabinet, Florida Legislature, state agencies, and city and county commissions. Pittman counsels a wide variety of clients including public entities, small businesses, Fortune 500 companies, private citizens and associations.

“We are a boutique law firm that provides expertise in the areas of government relations, civil litigation, government law, administrative law, education law and more,” said Pittman. “I also take pride in my involvement in the local and statewide community through advocacy, serving on boards and volunteering. I love the opportunity to make a difference. Our work is often driven by important issues that impact the lives of everyday people. Our work gives us the opportunity to make laws, change laws, problem solve and have systemic impact on an ever-changing society.”

In the weeks leading up to and during legislative session, Pittman can often be found meeting with legislators, consulting with clients and briefing them on pending legislation, monitoring legislative proceedings, and reviewing bills, while still working on his many legal cases. He also co-hosts the television show “The Usual Suspects” and hosts a radio program and podcast, “The Sean Pittman Show,” where he analyzes complex issues and interviews local, state and national figures. While COVID-19 has changed the way Pittman and his colleagues work, it has not changed the hectic nature of their jobs during and outside of session. His firm’s ability to adapt to evolving situations like the one the world has experienced during COVID-19 has led to much success.

“You have to be proactive and forward thinking,” said Pittman. “In the midst of COVID, we made a decision to pivot and diversify our services and hired two new attorneys with expertise in education law and civil litigation. We are also venturing into new programming for legal interns. I believe my firm’s willingness and ability to adapt and evolve has made us better as we move beyond COVID.”

A South Florida native, Pittman also remains engaged in that community. Since 2005, he has been an active member of the prestigious Orange Bowl Committee, where he served as president in 2018-2019. “Prior to my selection for membership on the committee, there had only been two Tallahassee residents elected. Even more rare, I was the first person elected president not from or living in Miami,” said Pittman. “Being president of the Orange Bowl Committee was a labor of love. The opportunity to work closely for many years with conference commissioners, university presidents, athletic directors, faculty and student athletes on very important issues within collegiate sports has made me a believer that athletics and the academic enterprise can succeed together.”

With FSU Law located in the capital of Florida, it is no surprise that many alumni cultivate careers in the public policy and government arenas. Pamela Burch Fort ('77) is president of The Commerce Group and specializes in legislative and political consulting. Joe Briggs ('07) serves as public policy counsel for the NFL Players Association in Washington, D.C. Shenika “Nik” Harris ('04) served as Florida’s first statewide LGBTQ Consumer Advocate at the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, and is now director of strategic outreach and engagement for the Human Rights Campaign. Kenneth Lawson ('91) has led the Florida Department of Economic Opportunity, VISIT FLORIDA, and the Florida Department of Business and Professional Regulation, and now serves as interim executive director of North Carolina Outward Bound School. G.C. Murray II ('12), who is special counsel and director of membership at the Florida Justice Institute, was honored in 2020 as the Young Floridian of the Year for his community service work.
Rosalyn “Sia” Baker-Barnes (’00)

Rosalyn “Sia” Baker-Barnes is a shareholder at Searcy Denney Scarola Barnhart & Shipley, P.A. in West Palm Beach. She serves on the firm’s executive committee and specializes in plaintiff’s personal injury law, medical negligence and product liability cases. Among her most notable cases is her $20 million jury verdict against R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, a wrongful death case spanning more than 10 years and reaching the U.S. Supreme Court.

“My practice is high intensity, in and out of the courtroom, and I handle cases throughout the state of Florida,” said Baker-Barnes. “Although it is very time consuming, my practice is also very rewarding, as I have the unique opportunity to improve the lives of my clients, most of whom have nowhere else to turn and are in desperate need of help.”

Baker-Barnes has represented many young children who suffered brain injuries due to medical negligence. “These cases take years to prosecute, multiple weeks to try, and are extremely difficult. They are also very rewarding because achieving a successful result can make a real difference in the lives of these families. My clients have received specialized treatment and therapies to maximize their abilities. In some instances, because of that specialized treatment, I have had clients who were told they would never walk or talk, do just that.”

Recently, Baker-Barnes represented the mother of a 19-year-old autistic student who ultimately died due to a lack of school supervision that had been promised by the Palm Beach County School Board. The young man’s father was represented by fellow FSU Law alumna Salesia Smith-Gordon (’92). The case settlement of $2 million was well above the state sovereign immunity caps. Additionally, the settlement required new training for employees in the Palm Beach school district, named after their client, that could very well save additional lives.

Other Black alumni who have garnered success in traditional legal practice include Kareem Spratling (’06), a shareholder at Bryant Miller Olive who leads the firm’s public finance team and serves on its board of directors; Earnest DeLoach (’99), who is vice president – legal at Balfour Beatty U.S. Southeast Division and also co-leads the company’s national diversity, equity and inclusion initiatives; and Markenzy LaPointe (’99), who is a partner at Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pittman in Miami, where he co-leads the firm’s product liability practice.

Although she has an extremely demanding practice and is a wife and mother of three children, Baker-Barnes is fully engaged in the legal profession. She was the first African-American female president of the Palm Beach County Bar Association, chaired the Florida Justice Association’s Young Lawyer’s Section and served for four years on The Florida Bar’s Leadership Academy Committee. She now serves on The Florida Bar Board of Governors.

Baker-Barnes has also been active in efforts to combat racial injustices. Last year, she was involved in her firm’s creation of a television public service announcement and social media content denouncing hatred and systemic racism. She also worked with her AKA sorority and local chapter of The Links, Incorporated to increase voter turnout during the 2020 elections. In March 2021, Baker-Barnes received the Florida Anti-Defamation League’s Jurisprudence Award in recognition of her legal career and efforts against racism and discrimination. In April 2021, Baker-Barnes was honored by the Palm County Bar Association with the Judge Edward Rodgers Diversity Award.

Black Alumni Network

In 2020, alumni Jasymne Henderson (’15), Salesia Smith-Gordon (’92) and Kareem J. Spratling (’06) founded FSU Law’s Black Alumni Network (BAN) to help Black alumni coalesce resources, connect networks and share ideas in efforts to address the impact of systemic racism on legal education and the legal profession. The group’s mission is to empower and support the Black students, alumni, faculty and staff of the Florida State University College of Law in order to assist those individuals and the College of Law as a whole in achieving their full potential. Led by Smith-Gordon, who was installed as BAN president in February 2021, the alumni will help with recruiting new students, fundraising and supporting current Black FSU Law community members, among other goals. BAN also is focused on efforts to remove the name from the law school’s main classroom building.

“I believe we can do a lot to impact the lives of not just law students, but our alums,” said Henderson. “We have such a strong network, but I don’t think it’s ever been sufficiently leveraged in order to help young lawyers and even older attorneys get business or move their careers.” Henderson believes it would have been extremely beneficial for her to interact more with successful Black female attorneys when she was a law student, so she is hoping BAN will help current students see what is possible for them after graduation.

Smith-Gordon and Henderson also want BAN to be a resource for the law school to help foster relationships with potential Black faculty members—to encourage them to join and remain members of the FSU Law community. They also want BAN members to be a resource and knowledge-base for fellow alumni as they navigate their careers.

The Black Alumni Network is open to all graduates of FSU Law, not just the law school’s 550-plus Black alumni, and BAN leaders are encouraging everyone to get involved.

“There is a mutual benefit for altruistic reasons,” said Smith-Gordon about why alumni should join BAN. “There is also a benefit from a professional standpoint and from a financial standpoint. My objective is to not add a lot of time or effort to someone’s plate; we are tapped out. At some point you are going to need the assistance of others, whether it is ascending to the bench or election or appointment or needing letters written to connect with a partner at a law firm, and there is benefit in having the College of Law behind you. It is mutual because there are many programs of the College of Law for which we can lend our talents of time, even if it is for an hour. Iron sharpens iron and we aim for BAN to serve to enhance FSU College of Law and our profession.”

Henderson added, “We are at a time where we are recognizing on a more universal scale some of the impediments to success that people of color have faced. I think that you either want to be a part of the solution or you don’t. This is one way that lawyers, specifically, can be a part of the solution in addressing those impediments for law students and lawyers and professors.”

The following alumni are serving in BAN leadership roles, thereby lending their talents and time to be part of the solution:

- Salesia Smith-Gordon (’92), president, racial justice consortium co-chair and Florida Bar Board of Governors advisor
- Conti Smith (’07), president-elect
- Alicia Dixon (’10), secretary
- Kenneth D. Pratt (’99), treasurer and fund development
- Jasmyne Henderson (’15), general counsel, governmental affairs co-chair and networking chair
- Sia Baker-Barnes (’00), racial justice consortium co-chair
- Daynica Harley (3L), Black Law Students Association president and student liaison
- Marlon Hill (’95), communications chair and mentorship
- Hon. Anthony Miller (’00), judicial co-chair
- G.C. Murray II (’12), bylaws/corporate governance, membership development and recruitment
- Sean Pittman (’94), governmental affairs co-chair
- Hon. Stephen Stokes (’91), judicial co-chair
- Glenda Thornton (’89), faculty advisor

Alumni can visit law.fsu.edu/BlackAlumniNetwork to learn more about and join BAN.
Amie and Scott Remington met in Civil Procedure during their first year at FSU Law. They joke that Amie’s excellent note-taking ability was the reason for their connection. The pair often studied at Amie’s house, which was much more conducive to studying than Scott’s house across the street from the law school, which he recalled as “a great party house.”

Now, more than 25 years later, the Remingtons both have successful legal careers in Pensacola and a busy life at home as the parents of three.

Scott is the president and managing shareholder at Clark Partington Hart Larry Bond & Stackhouse. He has been with the firm since the Monday after he and Amie graduated from law school in 1997. He concentrates in the areas of litigation, real property and business law, spending half of his time practicing and half managing the firm’s five offices and approximately 100 employees.

“I always thought I would be a plaintiff’s lawyer or a civil rights lawyer, but when I showed up for the first day of work, my supervisor Bill Bond (’77) told me I was going to be a real property lawyer,” Scott remarked. “I enjoy working with clients and helping see their projects and dreams come to fruition.”

Through his work, Scott has been instrumental in helping clients like Quint Studer revitalize downtown Pensacola. He is general counsel to the Pensacola Blue Wahoos minor league baseball team and has represented some of the most transformative leaders in the community. He also serves as general counsel for Triumph Gulf Coast—the organization responsible for distributing $1.5 billion in economic aid resulting from the state’s lawsuit against BP.

Now serving in his ninth year as managing shareholder, Scott jokes that the job is “like nailing Jell-O to a cat.”

“You deal with a lot of very smart and talented people and I receive a great deal of joy watching young lawyers develop and succeed as part of a team,” said Scott. “If you grew up playing team sports or serving in the military, you enjoy the satisfaction of working with a team to bring about a positive result for a client.”

Clark Partington’s culture and emphasis on teamwork are such that Scott and many other talented attorneys have stayed at the firm for decades. Because the attorneys enjoy working together, Scott counts colleagues among his closest friends. They take vacations together.
and socialize on the weekends.

“I inherited a fantastic culture. I did very little to build it,” said Scott, who is in the final year of his third term leading the firm. “The greatest responsibility I have is to do my best to maintain what was handed off to me and be in a position to pass that on to the next leader with the firm in as good—or better—a place than I found it.”

Scott is looking forward to transitioning back to practicing law full time and the increased client contact and courtroom time/Zoom time that will inevitably follow.

Like Scott, Amie began working at a Pensacola law firm the Monday after graduating from law school. She fell in love with employment law when she was assigned to a sexual harassment case as an associate at Bozeman Jenkins & Matthews and has been practicing in the area ever since. For the past 15 years, she has served as general counsel at LandrumHR, a national human capital firm offering permanent and interim staffing, PEO and workforce solutions to its business clients.

“I believe in civil rights to my core, so if I can help employers pay their employees correctly, maintain safe work places, and maintain fairness and transparency, I can positively impact employees’ lives,” said Amie. “Our company currently has about 9,000 job-site employees and my job helps those employees live better because they are all being paid fairly, they’re all being treated fairly and they’re all being trained properly.”

Amie relishes the teaching aspect of her job and speaks frequently to employers and industry groups around the nation about employment law. She has spoken to more than 20,000 people about how to be compliant with the law, thereby helping employees who don’t even know she is advocating for them.

The Athens, Georgia native has been fortunate to have the flexibility to work part time since the Remingtons’ first child was born in 1999. For two decades, Amie has divided her daily schedule between her career and her children.

“My week involves taking the kids to school and doing family things until 7:30 a.m. and then working until 2:00 p.m. When I pick the kids up from school, I am able to flip the switch and prioritize my family,” said Amie, who credits Scott with her being able to spend time with the kids in the afternoons. “I’ve been really lucky to be able to maintain that balance all these years. At LandrumHR, I get to do the professional legal tasks that I think are fascinating, like read the law, do a lot of writing, presentations and teaching. And then at the end of the day, I get to learn a little biology, find ‘x’ in algebra problems and listen to saxophone lessons.”

In addition to their two boys at home—tenth-grader Tom and eighth grader Harry—the Remingtons have a daughter, Virginia, who is a junior at Florida State University. Shortly after she began studying at Florida State, the Remingtons purchased a small farm in Red Bay, which is halfway between Pensacola and Tallahassee and allows them greater flexibility to visit Virginia and attend FSU events.

“We love to spend time there when we can, gardening and chasing guinea hens,” said Scott, who enjoys growing and cooking a wide variety of vegetables. The farm is a place where they watch movies, read, ride their MULE in the woods, cook over a fire pit and “get off the grid.”

At home, Pensacola has been a wonderful environment for the Remingtons to raise their children and cultivate their careers. Upon moving to Pensacola, Scott and Amie married at St. Christopher’s Episcopal Church, and have been actively engaged personally and professionally with the church. As chancellor of the church for 20 years, Amie provides general counsel services and
Amelia “Mel” Rea Maguire: Challenge Accepted
By Christi N. Morgan

Amelia “Mel” Rea Maguire relishes taking on new challenges and devotes herself wholeheartedly to each new endeavor. Perhaps that is why she has experienced much success in a wide variety of roles throughout her career. Maguire believes a major reason for the steep slope of her career trajectory is that she had a southern mother and her father was a United States Coast Guard officer. “I was as a military brat. We moved every 18 months but had a deep sense of place provided by my mother,” recalled Maguire. “That set my ability to be flexible, stay grounded and look at opportunities.”

Throughout her career, the FSU Law Class of 1986 graduate has worked as a teacher, as the leader of a state agency, on political campaigns, as an associate dean in higher education and as an attorney at two global law firms. She now serves as president of REA International, a business advisory consulting firm, with global clients interested in starting companies in Florida.

“What I like most is the challenge of not knowing and then figuring out what to do. I like solving a problem. If I don’t know something, that is what I want to do. I think change and remaining flexible and standing back, assessing what was going on and understanding how to move into new environments set the beam on which I walk.”

Once Maguire accomplishes something, she typically is ready for a new challenge. Helping businesses overcome obstacles is an ideal role for her. “Most of the companies I have represented (pre-COVID) were multi-million dollar companies, but didn’t necessarily have a presence in the United States. I would advise them on different aspects of what they needed to do—on finding a lawyer and an accountant, on economic development incentives and on corporate regulatory aspects of creating a viable business platform in the U.S. I introduce them to people in the community they need to meet.”

Since the spread of COVID-19, Maguire’s business activities have changed, but she has found new ways to stay busy and to thrive. Her pursuits include taking up tai chi and increasing her creative writing efforts.

“I started taking writing courses out of New York and Miami,” said Maguire, who is currently working on a draft of a creative non-fiction piece. “My research is from 1830 through 1900 about the migration of the planter class...”
out of Virginia to Mississippi. They were given Indian lands by President Andrew Jackson in the 1830s. The facts and the history are true. The characters and dialogue are fictionalized. It’s an area I’ve been interested in for years.”

During the COVID lockdown, Maguire and her husband, Jose Gelabert-Navia—a former dean of the architecture school at the University of Miami—walk every morning and they bought “Townie” bicycles to ride frequently around Coral Gables. Pre-pandemic, the couple enjoyed entertaining at their home, traveling all over the world, going to the movies and dinner with friends, and visiting art museums and cultural events.

The couple stays connected with friends and family through Zoom parties. Their family includes newborn grandson Julian, 5-year-old grandson Navian, daughter Caroline and son-in-law Sage.

Maguire has also ramped up her pro bono and charitable work. She is passionate about her board work with the Florida Justice Institute, which advocates for prison reform and against housing discrimination. She also serves on the Coast Guard Foundation and The Florida House boards and on the law school’s Board of Visitors. Maguire is an enthusiastic supporter of FSU Law’s business program. In 2002, she established an endowment for the annual Amelia Rea Maguire Business Law Lecture. The lecture series grew out of Maguire’s passion for the intersection of law and business.

During her time as a partner at Holland & Knight LLP and Steel Hector & Davis LLP, Maguire observed that many lawyers did not have strong business knowledge to best understand clients’ needs. “I realized lawyers worked in silos,” recalled Maguire. “They knew the law, but lawyers didn’t necessarily understand the business, the industry or the products of their clients. They were disconnected from the business. I think the intersection of law and business is the center of the wheel for viability—in client development, in client representation and in pay.” She saw this year’s DE&I panel as a way to bring progress in law firms for underrepresented groups. The panel featured DE&I experts, including Holland & Knight’s firm-wide diversity partner and Stearns Weaver Miller’s Diversity Committee chair, who provided perspective on the work being done, and the progress still needed, to address law firm support for a strong multi-cultural environment.

Above all, Maguire encourages recent alumni of the law school to get involved in and support the college’s programs. “Even if your first donation is $25, set yourself up to give every year,” Maguire said. “As you start to make more money, give back more to the school. You should pick an area that is your passion. Equally important as giving money is giving time—mentor students, help students find jobs, do those things that someone probably did for you.”

Paying it back and “civic rent” are important tenets by which Maguire lives. “I had a lot of help. I am extremely motivated and I work hard, but I also was cultivated and supported by some pretty important people who helped me move forward—like Sandy D’Alemberte, Wayne Mixson, Chesterfield Smith and Bob Graham. They championed me. They saw something in me that gave them the desire to help me. What I owe to them and others is to turn around and help the people who come after me.”
Called to the Courtroom: B. Richard Young

By Beth N. Pannell

Richard Young reached a point in his life when he felt more comfortable sitting in the courtroom than anywhere else in the world. Born and raised in South Alabama, Young’s family moved to Pensacola when he was 11 years old. But Young, now the managing partner at Young, Bill, Boles, Palmer, Duke & Thompson, almost didn’t choose a life in the law. When he started law school, he came to a crossroads between teaching martial arts and becoming a lawyer. It was the encouraging words of a law professor that helped him get through three years of law school and put him on the trajectory of his current success.

“I couldn’t have picked a better profession,” said Young, a 1984 graduate of FSU Law. “I don’t think anything would have suited me better than what I’ve been doing.”

Since Young knew he wanted to be a trial lawyer and “be where the action was,” after graduating from law school he took a job in Miami at the firm now known as Kimbrell & Hamann. Although he first started with aviation crash work, the aviation cases rarely went to trial. He was advised by another lawyer at the firm to get some automobile cases because that was where the courtroom work was. “Before I knew it, I had tried 25 auto cases to verdict and had a really good track record winning them.”

Several years later, because he developed a good relationship with Geico as a client and because of his success rate for them, Young was invited to open Geico’s house counsel office in Miami, their first house counsel office in the state. He then opened their next house counsel office in Ft. Lauderdale and then one in Tampa. He ran those offices from 1988–1992.

Young moved back home to Pensacola at the end of 1992 and ran a house counsel office for Geico there before deciding he wanted to practice a wider range of trial law than just auto accident cases. With essentially no clients, he decided to branch out on his own. And with two young sons to provide for, he threw himself into building a practice. “I spent every day for a year trying to drum up clients.”

A turning point came in 1998 when Young received a call from a claims manager who thought a bad faith case they had was a little too difficult for his in-house attorney. Today, Young’s firm specializes in bad faith and coverage work, but they have done just about everything—including products liability, admiralty law, auto work and premises liability.

“I love pitting my wits against another lawyer in a courtroom,” said Young. “It really is a personal one-on-one competition. There’s going to be a winner and a loser, and I want to be the winner because the feeling of losing is so bad, something I could never encapsulate in words. But, the opposite is true when you win—the feeling of elation and joy referred to his firm’s lawyers as “exceptional—not just incredibly bright and skilled at what they do, but just really good people.” In this new role, Young still works with his team and does the analytical examination of cases he enjoys. “We like to talk to each other about and happiness is hard to describe, especially if you really have your heart into it.”

“I couldn’t have picked a better profession,” said Young, a 1984 graduate of FSU Law. “I don’t think anything would have suited me better than what I’ve been doing.”

Fortunately, due to his 90% rate of winning cases, Young doesn’t experience that losing feeling often.

“T’m very proud of my track record in the courtroom and how many cases I have won, and especially how many difficult cases. There’s no such thing as an easy bad faith case.” He is also proud of making a mark in the state of Florida on the law of bad faith. “It would be hard to crack a book and look at a case involving bad faith—you couldn’t look at five of them decided over the last 20 years without finding my firm name in one of them, or more.”

Although he loved being in the courtroom, as of January 1, 2021, Young is no longer trying cases. It was hard to walk away, but as much as he loved it, there came a point where he said, “I just think it’s time.”

Now, he’s moved into more of a consulting role for the trial lawyers in the firm to make use of his experience. Young feels strongly that comradery is one of the most important aspects of a successful, long-lasting firm and legal theories, legal ideas,” he said. “We love nothing better than to have a tough case with some interesting facts and something we think the average bear would have a little trouble figuring out ‘how do you win this thing?’—figuring out our strategy and coming up with the angle that nobody else considered. The argument that was there all the time, it just wasn’t obvious to everybody. So, I spend a good bit of time kicking theories around with them, working out strategies and discussing how to respond to certain things.”

Now that Young is retired from the courtroom, he hopes to have time for some of his other interests. Young has always loved outdoor activities, including almost anything on the water. He lives on the beach in Pensacola and has property in Alabama, where he considers being out in the woods therapy. Young enjoys fishing, hunting and snow skiing. And as soon as the COVID-19 restrictions end, he intends to do a lot of traveling.

Young is a Golden Chief, a big supporter of Seminole athletics and “bleeds garnet and gold for our football team,” but in 2007 he asked himself, “If I as an alum of Florida State don’t support my law school and make it the best that it can be, then who will? If not me, then who?”

To support his love of trial practice and because there was no Trial Team when he was a law student, Young created the Young Family Endowment to support the FSU Law Trial Team, as well as a merit scholarship.

He recalled a time he spoke to the Trial Team and told them, “Everybody has their idea of what it means to be a lawyer and what they want to do. I don’t have any issues with any style of law they choose, but frankly, I can’t understand why anybody would want to be a lawyer and choose to be anything other than a trial lawyer.” Proud to be the first member of his family to graduate college and the only one to earn a doctorate, Young wanted to give back to the school so that students who want to be trial lawyers and want to engage in trial competitions, would have the opportunity to compete in those competitions across the country.

If competing in a Trial Team competition can give a student just a little taste of Young’s passion for the courtroom and mastery of the art of cross examination and creating a closing argument, they too may find their calling.
Q&A with Exemplary Public Service Career Award Winner Nancy Daniels

FSU Law presented alumna Nancy Daniels (’77) with the Exemplary Public Service Career Award in November 2020. The award recognizes a Florida State University College of Law graduate who has dedicated their career to public service and who has demonstrated exceptional character, integrity, humility and professionalism, as well as the highest regard for ethics. The following Q&A provides details about Daniels’ commitment to public service and what she has been doing since retiring as public defender for the Second Judicial Circuit of Florida in 2016.

What did receiving the 2020 Exemplary Public Service Career Award mean to you?
Receiving the 2020 Exemplary Public Service award was deeply meaningful to me. I value public service, and I’m so happy that our law school honors it with this award. Plus, it is wonderful to be in the company of previous winners Kris Knab and Debbie Kearney.

What did you like most about your public service work?
I loved representing clients in court more than anything, but every aspect of my work has been satisfying. Over the years, I have been a law clerk, an assistant public defender, a teacher, an elected public defender and now a consultant doing legislative analysis for the Florida Public Defender Association. All have been rewarding.

What have you been doing since retiring in 2016?
After retiring, I went to work “part-time” for the Florida Public Defender Association. It has been more demanding than I anticipated, but it is good work. I also serve on a number of boards and do various things at my church. I am always busy.

Why do you think it’s important for students and alumni to consider public service work?
I preach the value of public service because it is purposeful and satisfying for your soul, and it is conducive to work/life balance.

You previously served on the committee that formed this award and selected recipients—why did you choose to volunteer to serve on the committee and why was that important to you?
I was so impressed when the dean agreed to have our law school begin giving this award, and I found that she went about the selection process in a very rigorous manner. It gave me joy to read the nominations—there are so many inspirational, long-serving public servants who deserve the award.

What one thing do you wish people knew about public service work?
I wish people knew that public service legal work is not a career for second-rate lawyers. There are many AV-rated government lawyers who are outstanding scholars and practitioners.

What does being a public servant mean to you?
Doing public service as a lawyer has made me proud. When people make lawyer jokes about lawyers being greedy and sneaky, I absolutely hate it and can point proudly to the many wonderful public defenders, state attorneys, court lawyers, legislative lawyers and others who have not done their work for the money.
The FSU Law community was profoundly saddened by the loss of Professor Emeritus David L. Markell, who passed away on March 22, 2021, after a heroic battle with cancer. Although Markell retired from teaching in 2020 after 18 years at FSU, he remained actively engaged with many in our community and will be terribly missed.

“Dave was beloved for his kindness, generosity, hard work, inspired teaching, scholarly productivity, and service to the law school and broader community,” said Dean Erin O’Connor.

Markell grew up in Newark, Delaware. He graduated magna cum laude from Brandeis University and received his J.D. from the University of Virginia. Markell was an all-around athlete and played college and semi-pro baseball. After law school, Markell began his career with a prestigious judicial clerkship in his home state’s Supreme Court and brief stints at two D.C. law firms. He then moved from corporate law to a career with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the Environmental Enforcement Section of the U.S. Department of Justice, and leadership roles at the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation. Even after entering academia, he spent years engaged in environmental governance through his work with the North American Commission for Environmental Cooperation in Montreal.

Prior to joining the faculty at FSU, Markell taught at Albany Law School. Throughout his career he served as a visiting professor at Columbia Law School, University of Virginia School of Law, Lewis and Clark Law School, Melbourne Law School (Australia) and IDC Herzliya Radzyner Law School (Israel).

“Dave Markell was an immensely talented individual, but his gifts paled in comparison with his herculean work ethic,” said his environmental law colleague Shi-Ling Hsu, FSU Law D’Alembert professor. “Dave worked hard at everything, all the time. Instinctively modest, he led by example, but that example was extraordinary.”

During his tenure at Florida State University, Markell served in numerous leadership positions, including as an associate dean in three capacities—for academic affairs, environmental programs and research. As a scholar, he was nationally recognized as one of the top in his field. During his career, Markell published six books and more than 50 articles and book chapters on topics including climate change, compliance and enforcement, and North American environmental law and policy. One of his books was cited as “the most outstanding work of legal scholarship in the field” of administrative law and earned an annual American Bar Association Section award for scholarship. There is no doubt that his presence on the faculty was a big reason that the environmental law program has been highly regarded for so long.

“Dave was so humble and unassuming that I’m not sure everyone took note of the scholarly impact of his research and writing,” said Professor Emeritus Donna Christie, who served on the environmental law faculty with Markell for many years. “He just quietly and thoughtfully produced articles that were regularly chosen as among the best of the year in the annual, peer-reviewed Land Use and Environmental Law Review and books that garnered accolades. I was always impressed with his ability to engage scholars from around the country in his ideas and work. He published numerous co-authored pieces, and scholars around the country who worked with him on these articles and projects were duly impressed with his intellect and work ethic.”

“Dave was a remarkable friend, colleague, family member and fellow citizen,” said Erin Ryan, FSU Law Elizabeth C. & Clyde W. Atkinson professor and associate dean for environmental programs. “He devoted himself professionally to the highest aspirations of the environmental field, and he succeeded in a career marked by both academic and real-world accomplishments. To his prolific career of scholarly writing, Dave also brought the gift of high-level practical experience.”

Markell also was instrumental in connecting FSU Law—particularly the environmental law program—with the practicing profession. Markell wrote regular newsletter columns for The Florida Bar’s Administrative Law and Environmental and Land Use Law sections to promote the law school’s environmental programs, students,

“Dave Markell was an immensely talented individual, but his gifts paled in comparison with his herculean work ethic,” said his environmental law colleague Shi-Ling Hsu, FSU Law D’Alembert professor.
Emeritus Donald J. Weidner. “Even in extremely difficult courses to teach, like Legislation and Regulation, the students gave him rave reviews. And, though he taught many more students than most faculty, he took the time to integrate role-playing assignments into virtually all his courses.”

In addition to being a revered teacher, Markell helped multiple graduating students secure jobs in the environmental field. Moreover, while serving as the Steven M. Goldstein Professor, he regularly reached out to connect with students who were Goldstein scholars so that they would know more about Professor Goldstein and the values that drove his life and career in law. “Dave admirably filled both the spirit and the intent of the Goldstein professorship by bringing a wide variety of environmental law experts to the school to stimulate student interest in the field,” noted Professor Emeritus Charles W. Ehrhardt.

Every member of the FSU Law community who worked with Markell felt his kindness and generosity. He was welcoming to everyone and genuinely cared about his colleagues, students and the administrative team. He was never too busy to ask how someone’s family was (and to listen with genuine interest to their reply) or to give advice to a student about their professional endeavors. As his colleague Wayne Logan, the FSU Law Steven M. Goldstein professor related, “Dave Markell truly embodied what it means to be a dedicated teacher and public-spirited legal scholar. But more than that, Dave was a truly fantastic person.”

Markell was also an active volunteer within the Tallahassee Jewish community. He launched and ran for many years the Tallahassee Jewish Federation Teen Philanthropy Initiative (with support from the Rintels Foundation), a program that empowers teens to identify and address community needs, both locally and in Israel.

In addition, Markell was extremely devoted to his family. Markell’s wife Mona and their three daughters, Rebecca, Jenny and Rachel, were the light of his life. He coached the girls’ teams and cheered at their concerts and performances.

“Dave impressed me most by simply being one of the finest people I have ever known. Kind, thoughtful, caring, respectful of students and colleagues—I could make a list of noble characteristics that would fill a page. All of us who knew him are better for it,” said Professor Emeritus Christie.

“Dave’s remarkable career speaks for itself,” said Nat Stern, the FSU Law John W. & Ashley E. Frost professor. “Still, what I’ll always cherish most is the inspiration of his magnificent character. Dave made all of us better by the example of his endless kindness, devotion, dedication, generosity and profound humanity.”

As summed up by Professor Ryan, “I’m not sure a more decent man has ever walked the earth. I know I join everyone in the wider FSU and environmental community in feelings of profound loss and grief at his passing. The world is indeed smaller, and sadder, without him.”

Moot Court Team Wins Record Five Competitions—Most in the Nation!

The Florida State University College of Law Moot Court Team won an impressive five national competitions during the 2020-2021 competition season—winning four in four consecutive weeks during the spring semester. This is the first time FSU has won five national championships in one year and no other school in the nation had as many first-place victories. After such a successful season, the team is ranked the nation’s top team for national championships and eighth best moot court program.

In November, the team won first place in the 2020 Appellate Lawyers Association National Moot Court Competition. Florida State beat University of California-Hastings—whose moot court team was ranked second in the nation—in the finals. Winning team members were third-year law students Holly Parker Curry and Erin Tuck. In addition, third-year student Alexandra Gioffre participated in the brief writing portion of the competition. Courtney Brewer, a shareholder at Bishop & Mills in Tallahassee, and FSU Law alumna Judge Stephanie W. Ray (’95), of the First District Court of Appeal, coached the team to victory.

On February 27, the Moot Court Team won first place in the 2021 National Moot Court Competition in Child Welfare & Adoption Law. The competition was hosted by the Family & Youth Law Center at Capital University Law School. Twenty-six teams participated in the competition, including teams from Baylor University, Northwestern University, Ohio State University and William & Mary Law School.

Winning team members were second-year law students Kaitlin Anouge and Corinne Bowden. In addition, second-year student Megan Schroder participated in the brief writing portion of the competition. FSU Law alumni Nora Bailey (’17), of Dennis, Jackson, Martin & Fontela, P.A. in Tallahassee, and Jordann Wilhelm (’17), who practices at Radey Law Firm in Tallahassee, coached the team to victory. In addition to winning the national championship, Anouge won Best Oralist honors in the finals and the team won the Second-Best Brief Award.

On March 6, the team won the 2021 Charleston School of Law National Moot Court Competition. Sixteen law school teams participated in the competition, including teams from George Washington University, University of North Carolina and University of Wisconsin.

Winning team members were third-year law students Chad Revis and Brooke Stewart. In addition, third-year student Daniel Corbett participated in the brief writing portion of the competition. The Honorable James R. Wolf, who was a judge on the Florida First District Court of Appeal before retiring in 2020, coached the team to victory. Alumna JoLen Rawls Wolf (’76), who previously taught at FSU Law, also played a substantial role in preparing the team for competition.

On March 13, the team won the 2021 UCLA School of Law Cybersecurity Moot Court Competition. Thirty-two law school teams participated in the competition, including teams from Duke University, Boston University, Emory University, Fordham University and the University of Illinois. Florida State competed against George Washington University in the final round.

Winning team members were third-year law students Rachel Duffy and Genevieve Lemley. The team was coached by FSU Law alumnus Sam Steinberg ('13), assistant appellate defender at the Office of the State Appellate Defender in Chicago.

On March 20, FSU’s Moot Court Team won the 2021 Seigenthaler-Sutherland Cup National First Amendment Moot Court Competition, which was hosted by Columbus School of Law. Twenty-five law school teams from 16 states participated in the competition, including a team from the University of Wisconsin, which Florida State beat in the final round.

Winning team members were third-year law students Gabriela De Almeida and Hannah DuShane. In addition, third-year student Julia McDonald participated in the brief writing portion of the competition. De Almeida was also named Second-Best Oralist for her performance in the preliminary rounds and DuShane received a perfect score in the “knowledge of law” category from all three judges in the final round. FSU Law alumni Jonathan Martin ('15), of Bishop & Mills in Tallahassee, and Ian Waldick ('16), of Oertel, Fernandez, Bryant & Atkinson, P.A. in Tallahassee, coached the team to victory.

The College of Law hosted the second annual “Amelia Rea Maguire Business Law Lecture: A Panel on the Economics of Diversity, Equity and Inclusion” on Thursday, February 11, 2021. The virtual event, co-sponsored by the FSU College of Business, featured Tiffani G. Lee, a partner at Holland & Knight who also serves as the firm-wide diversity partner; Natalia Marulanda, a Mansfield Rule and knowledge sharing specialist with the Diversity Lab; and Jenea M. Reed, a shareholder at Stearns Weaver Miller who chairs the firm’s Diversity Committee. Carla Harris, CEO and managing director of The People Institute, moderated the panel and the event was sponsored by FSU Law alumna Amelia Rea Maguire ('87), who provided opening remarks.

Harris began the discussion by framing the importance of Diversity, Equity and Inclusion (DE&I) in the legal field for two main reasons: clients are now requiring that outside firms reflect the diversity of the customers they serve, and the high cost of attrition, stating the loss of just one associate can cost a firm hundreds of thousands of dollars. The expert panelists discussed the need to give more attention to pipeline development—more people from traditionally underrepresented groups coming into the profession, the importance of creating system-wide processes to mitigate unconscious individual bias, and the critical role of leadership in driving the culture of DE&I, including the important layer of middle-management leadership. They also discussed reasons for the slow progress that has been made in DE&I over the last 20 years and the Diversity Lab’s Mansfield Rule as a framework for tackling DE&I.
Federal Judges Visit FSU Law

Despite the pandemic, FSU Law hosted four outstanding federal judges during the 2020-2021 academic year.

On Tuesday, October 13, 2020, we hosted the Honorable Mary Stenson Scriven ('87), of the United States District Court for the Middle District of Florida, through our Jurist in Residence Program. Judge Scriven spoke with FSU Law students via Zoom about the value of judicial clerkships, what students can do to make themselves strong candidates for clerkships, the work performed by judicial clerks and the often life-long relationships that are formed between judges and clerks.

Judge Scriven was nominated by President George W. Bush on July 10, 2008, and took her seat on the bench on September 30, 2008. She had previously served as a magistrate judge in the district for more than 10 years. When she became a magistrate judge in 1997, she became the first African American woman to serve on the federal court in Florida and the second to serve on the federal court in the Eleventh Circuit. Prior to that, Judge Scriven was a shareholder with Carlton, Fields, Ward, Emmanuel, Smith & Cutler, P.A. She previously served on the FSU Law Alumni Association Board of Directors.

On October 20, 2020, we hosted Chief Judge Rebecca Pallmeyer, of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, as the second guest in our Jurist in Residence Program. Judge Pallmeyer discussed some of the important anniversaries of 2020, including her court’s 200th anniversary and the 100 years since the Spanish flu. She also spoke about her role in helping the court adapt to the numerous challenges brought on by COVID-19 and some of the positive changes we can imagine for the future after the pandemic. The meeting was moderated by Professor Mark Spottswood, Judge Pallmeyer’s former law clerk.

Judge Pallmeyer was nominated to a seat on the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois by President Bill Clinton on July 31, 1997, and received her commission on October 22, 1998. She became the chief judge of the Northern District of Illinois on July 1, 2019, and is the first female to do so in the court’s 200-year existence. She previously served as a United States magistrate judge of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois.

On Tuesday, February 16, we welcomed the Honorable Robert J. Luck to the law school. Judge Luck currently sits on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit and previously sat on the Florida Supreme Court. During his special visit to campus, Judge Luck gave a socially distanced presentation about the “Law Clerk Experience.” He discussed in great detail how federal courts operate in comparison to state courts, providing information about the powers provided by Article 3. He also talked about the responsibilities of law clerks in federal courts, what students need to do to best prepare for obtaining a clerkship, and the characteristics he looks for when hiring law clerks. Judge Luck also visited Professor Glenda Thornton’s 1L Legal Writing & Research II class and met with faculty members comprising our Judicial Clerkship Committee.

Judge Luck was nominated to the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit on October 15, 2019 by President Donald Trump. Prior to his appointment to the Florida Supreme Court in 2019, Judge Luck was a district judge on the Florida Third District Court of Appeal and a circuit judge for the Eleventh Judicial Circuit Court of Florida.

On March 31, the College of Law and the Student Federal Bar Association hosted the Honorable Jill Pryor, of the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit. During a virtual presentation, Judge Pryor commented on what motivated her to become a judge and how her experience as a litigator shapes her judicial perspective. She also gave tips for effective oral arguments and discussed the characteristics she looks for in law clerks.
When asked what kind of opportunities she would advise students to seek out before applying for a judicial clerkship, Judge Pryor said there was no one formula. Personally, she looks for passion and follow-through—“showing dedication and determination in pursuing something that keenly interests you.”

Judge Pryor was nominated to the U.S. Court of Appeals by President Barack Obama and was confirmed September 8, 2014. Previously, Judge Pryor was a partner at Bondurant, Mixson & Elmore, LLP, in Atlanta, where she specialized in complex business and commercial litigation, both at trial and on appeal. After law school, she clerked for Judge James Larry Edmondson, of the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit.

Trial Team Named Nation’s 15th Best and Wins Competition

In 2020, the FSU Law Trial Team was named the nation’s 15th best in Fordham University School of Law’s annual ranking of the country’s top trial teams. This was the first time FSU was ranked in the Trial Competition Performance Rankings. The ranking was based on achievement in interscholastic law school trial competitions during the 2019-2020 academic year. Teams earned points for winning competitions, and also for advancing to the final and semi-final rounds of competitions. During the academic year reflected in the ranking, the Trial Team placed first in the 2019 Mockingbird Challenge National Trial Competition, second in the 2019 Buffalo-Niagara Mock Trial Competition and the 2019 American Association of Justice Southeast Regional Tournament, and third in the 2019 MLK Jr. Civil Rights Competition. The team also had several additional semi-final round appearances and earned two best advocate awards during the year.

In October 2020, the Trial Team won first place in the Buffalo-Niagara Mock Trial Competition. The competition was held virtually over three days and hosted by the University of Buffalo School of Law. FSU Law’s Trial Team also won the Buffalo-Niagara Mock Trial Competition in 2016.

Twenty-four law school teams participated in the 2020 competition. Other competing law schools included Fordham University, University of Maryland, University of Pennsylvania, University of Wisconsin, and Washington and Lee University.

Winning team members were third-year law students Sidney Carter and Halley Lewis, IV, and second-year law students Christopher Ramirez and Shaina Ruth. In addition, Ramirez earned the title of Best Advocate for the competition. FSU Law alumni Jasmine Henry (’19), who practices at Novey and Gonzalez in Tallahassee, and Rachel Lopez (’18), a deputy district attorney for the Denver District Attorney’s Office, coached the team to victory. As a law student, Lopez was a member of the 2016 Buffalo-Niagara winning team.
Florida State Ranked Nation’s 8th Best Value Law School

preLaw magazine has ranked Florida State University College of Law the eighth best value law school in the nation. The ranking, which was published in preLaw’s fall 2020 issue, weighs important student outcomes—bar passage and employment rates—against tuition, cost of living and indebtedness. According to preLaw, the rankings are “designed to recognize schools whose graduates have excellent chances of passing the bar and getting a legal job without taking on a ton of debt.”

“We are thrilled to again be ranked among the nation’s top 10 best value law schools, especially because employment rate is the highest weighted factor in calculating the ranking,” said Dean Erin O’Connor. “Providing each student with an excellent legal education that will help them launch a successful career is extremely important to everyone at FSU Law.”

For the second year in a row, the FSU Black Law Students Association (BLSA) won first place in the regional Constance Baker Motley Mock Trial Competition. The competition took place virtually January 29-30 as part of the Southern Region of the Black Law Students Association’s convention. Seven law school teams participated in the competition, including teams from Emory University and Wake Forest University.

Winning team members were first-year students David Akintonde, Samantha Seiglie, Khamisi Thorpe, Keiana Wilkerson and alternate Ndeye “Fatou” Calixte. They were coached by Florida State law alumnus Derrick McBurrows (‘16), who practices at McBurrows Law in Tallahassee, and second-year law student Destinee Campbell, who was a member of the FSU BLSA team that won the competition in 2020.
FSU Law Joins Consortium for Racial Justice

Florida State University College of Law, in collaboration with Florida’s 11 other law schools, formed the Florida Law Schools’ Consortium for Racial Justice (FLSCRJ) during the summer of 2020. The consortium was initiated in light of longstanding and recent acts of racial injustice. It will leverage the strengths of every law school in the state to assist community organizations fighting for racial justice and policy reform. FLSCRJ will emphasize lawyers’ roles in advancing social justice and help law students develop the consciousness they need to speak out against inequalities.

Each law school will designate at least one student fellow to work with FLSCRJ every year. The fellows will collaborate with groups in Florida that have long pursued anti-racism initiatives. The law schools’ current partners, including community foundations, non-profit groups, law firms, businesses, policy centers, art collectives, advocacy groups, educational entities and bar associations, are already well placed to be part of this collaboration. The consortium also welcomes other interested organizations.

Law student fellows will assist FLSCRJ’s partners with legal research, policy reform, strategic advocacy, and ways to use language to resolve conflicts and improve society at large. Fellows will also undergo tailored training to model effective dialogue about race within each law school and across the state as a whole.

SBA Wins Top Award From American Bar Association

In 2020, for the fourth consecutive year, the American Bar Association (ABA) Law Student Division presented the Florida State University College of Law Student Bar Association (SBA) with the Student Bar Association Award, which honors the best SBA in the nation. The honor is also known as the SBA of the Year Award and recognizes the efforts of an SBA to create a better environment for law students and positive image of the legal profession. Top law schools from around the nation competed for the award, which was announced virtually Friday, July 31, 2020, during the ABA Annual Meeting. This was the ninth time since 2008 that Florida State’s SBA was selected as the best SBA in the nation.

The Florida State University College of Law SBA was honored following a year of many accomplishments. During the 2019-2020 academic year, SBA held 66 in-person events and four virtual events after gatherings were restricted due to COVID-19. SBA’s robust programming included a Diversity Week and many volunteer opportunities and fundraisers, including a Carnival for a Cure to benefit the American Cancer Society of Leon County. In addition, SBA held its inaugural Journey to Justice 5K, raising more than $1,200 to benefit the Legal Aid Foundation of Tallahassee. SBA also engaged regularly with the profession through numerous educational events with attorneys and judges.
Pave the Way Fundraising Goal Reached

Many thanks to everyone who gave to the Pave the Way campaign and who encouraged others to donate! Because of your generous support, talented students have been able to attend FSU Law, take on less debt and pursue their passions. In many cases, lives were changed. To celebrate this achievement and the donors who invested in FSU Law students, we hosted a Zoom reception on Wednesday, February 10, 2021. Pave the Way donors, along with other alumni, students, faculty members and friends joined the celebration. In addition to hearing about the campaign, the event featured remarks from students who received scholarships and from campaign donors.

FSU Law Named One of the Nation’s Top Seven Law Schools for Human Rights Law

In September 2020, FSU Law was named one of the nation's top seven law schools for human rights law by preLaw magazine. preLaw's article about the ranking highlighted the law school's Collateral Consequences Project, which is a project within the Public Interest Law Center Gender and Family Justice Clinic focusing on issues that may hamper people's ability to reenter society because of their criminal histories. The project is one of many clinical offerings for students interested in human rights law. Students can also participate in a variety of externships, the Human Trafficking and Exploitation Law Project, the COVID-19 Veterans Legal Clinic, and the Immigration and Farmworker Project. FSU Law also offers a variety of traditional classroom courses in human rights law. During the spring 2021 semester, we offered a new civil rights course and a new course taught by alumni Ben Crump ('95) and Jasmine Rand ('09) that covered social and legal movements for social justice.

THANKS TO OUR 2019-2020 DONORS

Gifts to Florida State University College of Law provide critical support for students, faculty and academic programs. This Annual Report is one way of expressing our appreciation for all gifts received between July 1, 2019 and June 30, 2020. Gifts received between July 1, 2020 and June 30, 2021 will be recognized in the 2022 issue of Florida State Law.

Thank you so much! We hope that our progress over the years has shown that we are putting your contributed dollars to good use.

We strive to produce a complete and accurate report. Please call any errors or omissions to the attention of:

Dear Alumni and Friends:

This was a year of both great challenge and great success for the law school. Despite the COVID-19 pandemic, the reputation of our outstanding students, faculty and alumni continues to blossom. We continue to attract some of the strongest students, as well as maintain some of the highest bar passage rates and best job placement rates in Florida and the region.

Private fundraising makes a critical difference at the law school, helping us attract and support the best students and faculty.

TOTAL GIFTS AND PLEDGES

Putting annual giving and larger gifts together, we raised a cash total of $1,147,583 and unrealized new pledges in the amount of $247,000, for a grand total of $1,394,583.

ANNUAL GIVING FROM ALUMNI

This past year, 21.46% of our alumni made cash gifts to the law school. Based on the latest American Bar Association data, this level of participation should keep us within the nation’s top law schools in terms of alumni giving rate. This level of alumni contributions enriches the life of the school and sends a powerful signal about the enthusiasm our alumni have for the school.

GIVING FROM STUDENTS

This past year, 85.10% of our students participated in the Student Give Back Campaign. Our student enthusiasm and generosity bode well for the future. They are blazing the trail for us all!

LARGER GIFTS

This past year, cash payments received totaled $200,500 towards $447,500 of Larger Gift commitments. The “Cash Gifts By Level” portion of this report includes only cash payments made during the fiscal year, even if they were but a portion of a larger gift. Under the heading of “Recent Larger Gifts,” we outline the larger gift commitments that we received in the 2019-2020 fiscal year.

We are deeply grateful to everyone who has contributed to our many successes. We shall continue to do our best to pay great dividends on the dollars you have invested in our school.

Sincerely,

Erin O’Hara O’Connor, Dean
ENDOWED GIFT OPPORTUNITIES

ENDOWED SCHOLARSHIPS
Our single greatest need from private giving is endowed scholarships. To continue to serve our mission of providing access to all, including those from families of modest means, we will need significantly more scholarships. Scholarships are awarded according to the intent of the donor and may be based on merit, need or other factors. The endowed scholarship would be named after you or your designee.

Minimum gift needed to create an endowed scholarship: $25,000 (may be paid over time)

ENDOWED PROFESSORSHIPS AND CHAIRS
According to a 2018 study of law faculty scholarly impact, our faculty is #1 in Florida and #29 nationally. Our faculty members are being recruited by some of the nation’s most prominent law schools. Endowed professorships and chairs provide salary supplements based on merit. Faculty members are appointed for five-year terms, with renewal contingent on continued scholarly productivity. Professorships and chairs give us the merit money we need to retain our top faculty. The professorship or chair would be named after you or your designee.

Minimum gift needed to endow a professorship: $200,000 (may be paid over time)
Minimum gift needed to endow a chair: $1,000,000 (may be paid over time)

ENDOWMENTS FOR EXCELLENCE
Endowments for excellence are used, at the discretion of the law school, for purposes such as student scholarships, faculty incentives, general discretionary dollars and funding for co-curricular activities including Law Review, Trial Team, and Moot Court. The endowment for excellence would be named after you or your designee.

Minimum gift needed to create an endowment for excellence: $25,000 (may be paid over time)

ENDOWMENTS FOR PARTICULAR PROGRAMS
Private philanthropy has helped us take many of our existing programs to a new level of excellence. Our award-winning Moot Court and Trial Teams benefit from private contributions to supplement the dollars available to them for purposes such as traveling to regional and national competitions. Our Public Interest Law Center, which includes the Children’s Advocacy Clinic, the Gender and Family Justice Clinic, and the COVID-19 Veterans Legal Clinic, relies on private contributions to help pay for some of the expenses involved in training students to provide effective legal services to the under-represented. An important goal of the law school is to raise substantial endowments to support special programs and co-curricular organizations. Some programs simply would not exist at the law school but for the generous support of our alumni.

Minimum gift needed to create an endowment to benefit a particular program: $25,000 (may be paid over time)

DONOR RECOGNITION
We are delighted to recognize scholarships, professorships and other targeted gifts by naming them in honor of the donor or the donor’s designee. In addition, we are pleased to acknowledge inter vivos gifts of $200,000 or more with an oil portrait of the donor or the donor’s designee that will be displayed in a prominent place at the law school. The Advocacy Center and the renovated spaces in the main classroom building give us many rooms to name to thank donors for gifts ranging from $25,000 to $5 million.
RECENT LARGER GIFTS

We would like to specially thank those of you who made a larger gift commitment between July 1, 2019, and June 30, 2020. These gifts make it possible to continue the dynamic advancement of the academic programs and reputation of the law school.

Thomas “Tom” Conroy (’74) has made an additional deferred contribution of $100,000 to his already established Thomas W. Conroy Scholarship. The scholarship is used to attract top students to the College of Law. Tom is retired from the practice of law. He was founding partner of the firm Conroy Simberg Ganon Krevans & Abel before retiring. He is an emeritus member of the law school’s Board of Visitors.

M. Stephen Turner has made a pledge of $100,000 to create the M. Stephen Turner Legal Advocacy Fund. The fund will provide scholarship support to outstanding advocates who participate in the Moot Court program, as well as provide financial support for students accepted into appellate judicial externships. Steve has been a partner in the Tallahassee office of Broad and Cassel (now known as Nelson Mullins) and has focused his practice on appellate, administrative and business litigation issues.

JoLen (’76) and Judge James Wolf have made additional pledges to their already established funds: a $25,000 pledge to the Judges John S. Rawls and James R. Wolf Intramural Moot Court Competition as well as a $17,500 pledge to the John S. Rawls and Samuel Wolf Endowed Scholarship. The funds support the FSU College of Law Moot Court Team as well as scholarships that enhance the diversity of the student body. JoLen is a faculty member as well as a member of the College of Law’s Board of Visitors. Judge James Wolf recently retired from the First District Court of Appeal in Tallahassee.

David Varet (’12) and the Middle Road Foundation have contributed $40,000 to support the College of Law’s General Fund. David is an assistant regional counsel with the Office of Criminal Conflict and Civil Regional Counsel’s 5th District Office in Orlando. He is a member of the College of Law’s Board of Visitors.

Mark (’83) and Marianne Barnebey have made an additional deferred gift of $30,000 which will ultimately support their already established Mark P. and Marianne P. Barnebey Endowed Scholarship. The eventual gift will support students who have shown outstanding academic achievement and come from Manatee County. Mark is a principal at the Blalock Walters firm in Bradenton, where his practice has focused on land use and local government law for more than 30 years.

Lois “Anne” Daves has made a gift of $30,000 to support the Veterans Legal Clinic. The clinic provides free legal services to veterans throughout the state of Florida. Anne is a retired educator, 1964 graduate of the FSU College of Education and avid Seminole. Her support of the clinic is in part to honor her husband John’s service in the U.S. military.

Margaret “Peggy” Rolando (’78) has made an additional contribution of $30,000 to her already established Peggy Rolando Endowment for Excellence. Endowments for excellence support the College of Law in the areas of greatest need. Peggy is a partner in the firm Reyes, O’Shea & Coloca, P.A., where he focuses on personal injury, products liability and toxic torts.

AccessLex Institute has made a gift of $25,000 to support the law school’s student emergency fund. The funds will be used to support students who have been negatively impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic. AccessLex Institute is a non-profit organization focused on the betterment of legal education by way of research, advocacy and financial education counseling.

Steve (’70) and Blanche Koegler have made an additional contribution of $25,000 to their already established Steven C. & Blanche Koegler Scholarship. The fund is used to award scholarships to law students who have financial need and who otherwise could not afford to attend law school. Steve is a principal of Forum Capital Group, a privately held investment group which focuses on business opportunities in real estate and the food industry. Steve is a member of the College of Law’s Board of Visitors.

Daniel “Danny” (’89) and Laura O’Shea have made an additional contribution of $25,000 to their already established O’Shea Family Endowment for Excellence. Endowments for excellence support the College of Law in the areas of greatest need. Danny is a partner in the firm Reyes, O’Shea & Coloca, P.A., where he focuses on personal injury, products liability and toxic torts.

BOOK AWARD SPONSORS  (as of June 30, 2020)

Book Awards generate scholarship funds for the college and recognize the academic achievements of law students. They also recognize the highest student grade in each sponsored course. Awards are sponsored with an annual contribution of $3,000 per year for each of five years. For information about Book Award sponsorship, please contact Becky Shepherd, executive director of alumni outreach and engagement, at 850.644.0231 or rshepher@law.fsu.edu.
